This special edition of the History of the Kimball Family in America has been prepared for the Kimball Family Association. It is a complete reproduction, including pictures, of the 1897 edition.

The Kimball Family Association, Inc. was organized in 1968 and incorporated in 1972 to research, study, perpetuate, and enrich the heritage of Richard Kimball and his descendants. The reprinting of this book will enable many to have access to the early records of the Kimballs in America.

The Kimball Family Association, Inc. continues to collect, organize, and provide additional genealogical and historical data on all Kimballs and their descendants. A permanent collection of materials relating to the family has been established at the Haverhill Public Library, Haverhill, Massachusetts 01830.

ARRANGEMENT.

The arrangement followed in this work is that recommended by Mr. John Ward Dean and used in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register.

Each head of a family receives a number when first mentioned. The families of Henry Kemball[1] of Watertown, and Richard[1] of Ipswich, are numbered independently. Independent numbers are given to several families who are mentioned in the last chapter of the work.

Taking as an illustration, the family of Richard[1]: He had eleven children, who are numbered i. to xi. Henry[2], the oldest son, has the number "2" before his name. Richard[2], the next son, has the number "3" before his name. John is number "4", Thomas[2] is number "5", Benjamin[2] is number "6", and Caleb[2] is number "7". Turning to the next generation we find the first name under it is Henry Kimball[2], the head of a family, with the figure "2" before his name. The next family in this generation is that of Richard Kimball[2], who has the figure "3" before his name, and so on with the rest of this generation. Looking now at the children of Henry Kemball[2] we find that John[3], of the third generation, has the figure "8" before his name, and turning to the third generation we find the first name there is John Kimball[3], who has the number "8" before his name. The small figures at the right of and above the name serve to show the generation to which the person belongs, counting the immigrant ancestor as one.

Names which do not have Arabic figures before them are not carried into the next generation. The only abbreviations used in this work, except for the states, are: b., born; d., died; m., married; res., resided; and dau., daughter. The places of birth of children are not given when their parents have resided continuously in one town. In cases where the parents have moved from one town to another, the place of birth and residence of the children has been given as far as possible. When the residences of the children are not given, they are, so far as known, the same as that of the parents.

EARLY MIGRATIONS OF THE KIMBALLS.

The descendants of Henry Kemball remained in Watertown and Waltham, Mass., and that vicinity, until after 1800; since that time some of them have settled in New Hampshire.

The principal settlements of the descendants of Richard Kimball have been as follows:

Henry[2] remained for some time after his marriage in Watertown, Mass. He ther removed to Ipswich, but finally settled in Wenham, Mass. He had three sons who left descendants. Henry[3] went to Haverhill, Mass. He left no descendants of the name. John[3] went first to Newbury, Mass., and then to Amesbury. His descendants are numerous; they went to New Hampshire and Maine. In late years, some of them have returned to the vicinity of Boston, Mass. Joseph[3] went to Preston, Conn.; his descendants lived there for two or three generations, and then some of them went to Plainfield, N. H. Richard Kimball[2] early settled in Wenham, and his descendants are still to be found in that town. One branch of this family went to Exeter, N. H., and another to Dover, N. H. One of his grandchildren, Ebenezer, went to Hopkinton, Mass. His descendants are very widely scattered; many of them are to be found in New York state and further west. Some still reside in Massachusetts.

John Kimball[3] went to Ipswich, Mass., with his father. His descendants are still in that town. One of his grandsons went to Norwich, Conn., and another to Stonington, Conn. They both left large families, and many of the Connecticut Kimballs are descended from them. Another descendant went to Buxton, Me. Still others went to Rhode Island, and most of the Rhode Island Kimballs belong to this branch.

Thomas Kimball[2] early settled in the part of Bradford now known as Groveland. His descendants have been numerous in that part of the town. One branch of this family emigrated to the vicinity of Fitchburg, Mass. Another went to Fryeburg, Me., and still another to Bridgton, Me. The descendants of Thomas Kimball have been prominent in public affairs.

Benjamin Kimball[2] went to Bradford to live near his wife's father; his family was thrifty and multiplied exceedingly, and occupied the land, until at one time it was said that every one in Bradford was named Kimball except one man, and his name was Kimball Farrar. Benjamin's descendants followed the Merrimack river northward, and they are the most numerous of the Kimballs in the Merrimack valley. Of late years, many of them have gone West.

Caleb Kimball[2] settled in Ipswich, and his descendants have been numerous in that part of Essex county. One of his grandsons went to Newbury, Mass.; his descendants settled in Sanbornton, N. H.

NOTICE.

In making our investigations for this work, it has been our rule to take everything we could find on the records. In this way, we have accumulated much more material than we could use. This material has all been carefully preserved. It has been found that in many instances dates differ on different records. We have done the best we could with our material; but, doubtless, errors will be found in the work. Any person discovering such errors, or wishing to make inquiries about Kimballs who are not recorded in the work, will please communicate with S. P. Sharples, 13 Broad St., Boston.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION.

In 1880, when the "History of the Morison or Morrison Family" was published, the thought came that it would be well for me to prepare a history of the Kimballs, as I had of the Morrisons. My mother being a Kimball, it was my great desire to know the history of her ancestors and to place such a history in permanent form. A memorial like this would be much more permanent than a granite shaft, and would be a reminder of them to their descendants in the present and in all the generations of the future. Since that time I have been diligently collecting information. It has been a most prolific race; its branches extend in all directions and its members have become as numerous as the leaves. To trace them out and to gather in their separate histories was like gathering in and numbering the autumnal forest leaves.

The Kimballs have long been plentiful in Ipswich, Mass., the old nesting ground, and from there they have spread to all parts of New England, and New York; many are in the great West, a few in the South, and some have gone to the Dominion of Canada. Nearly every section of the North American continent has its representatives of this Puritan stock.

Some of the name remained in England when the Kemballs emigrated to these shores in 1634. The family has never been numerous there, and is almost unknown outside of the parent county of Suffolk.

It was my intention to write only a history of the descendants of Benjamin Kimball[2], son of Richard[1], the Emigrant, my mother's branch of the family. It was found that in order to do this, much material relating to other branches must be collected. It was thought best to utilize this material. And by the advice and desire of members of the family, I was induced to undertake the history of all the Kimballs in America. The task expanded, and soon assumed enormous proportions. Richard Kimball[1], with his eleven children, made a large family; all his children married except one, and she may have married. For more than three hundred years, they have obeyed literally the injunction "to multiply and replenish the earth." The tree throve after it was transplanted. The material for the history for two hundred years was very scant. It was buried in court and town records or had to be gathered from the dim traditions of the past. Much of this information was collected before scarce a living representative of the race was reached. The family for two hundred years had lived in New England and left hardly a fragment of their history behind them save that recorded on the tombstones and the town books. Men had fought through the wars of the country from the affray at Bloody Brook, where Caleb Kimball was killed, down to the War of the Rebellion, where on many a hard-fought field the Kimballs were to be found. Information in regard to the last three generations, and especially in regard to the present one, was more easy, or should have been more easy, to procure. It was sought to obtain this from the public records and by correspondence with living members of the family.

In the midst of this wearisome and seemingly unending task, it was my good fortune to learn that Professor Stephen Paschall Sharples of Cambridge, Mass., whose wife is a descendant of Benjamin Kimball[2], was collecting and arranging information in regard to the family.

After some correspondence, we decided that we could do better work together than separately. Thus we became co-workers and co-editors. The field was abundantly large for our united efforts, and by this co-operation, a better, more thorough and accurate work has been produced than either of us could have prepared alone.

Genealogists and historians are born and not made. Professor Sharples, with his powerful natural bent in that direction, with his quick, strong, retentive memory, by his long training as an expert in another line, by his nearness to many public records, and by his business carrying him to all parts of New England, and by his access to many public records, original documents, and sources of information not readily accessible to me, was able to correct many errors in the accounts already published, to detect some in our manuscripts, and to verify much work already done. This labor he pursued to such a remarkable extent that this record is believed to be as nearly perfect as it is possible to make it.

Together we had collected a vast amount of facts, statistics, and material for biographies. Professor Sharples had taken charge of this so far as arranging it in genealogical order. In 1893, I made a copy of the work, wrote and inserted the biographical matter in the proper places, and prepared the manuscript for the printer. But for various reasons, the work was delayed. We still kept collecting material. New avenues opened before us, missing branches were discovered, and still more important, many missing links were found. In some instances, the identification of a single ancestor added over a hundred names to the record. So much additional matter was collected that it became evident that the entire work would have to be re-written in order to introduce in the appropriate places the new genealogical matter and the personal sketches and biographies that had come to hand. As I was on the point of beginning this task, a severe illness placed all work of the kind out of my power. The work therefore had to be completed by Professor Sharples. He is busily engaged in his professional duties, but for the past two years he has given all the time that he could to the work, spending on it an average of five hours a day, arranging the material already procured, writing many new biographical sketches, investigating doubtful points, and making a type-written copy for the printer.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE FAMILY.

In so long a study of a family, one cannot fail to observe those salient characteristics, mental and physical, which appear in successive generations. The same looks and physical build often present themselves in different branches very far removed in kinship. They often possess the same pronounced and peculiar qualities of mind. Many of the stock have been noted for their powerful and retentive memories. A public speech heard, a sermon listened to, the proceedings of a convention attended, would so powerfully impress themselves upon their minds that, years after, the words of the speaker would be recalled, the text of the preacher given, the substance of the discourse presented, the names of the leading men who had attended the convention mentioned, and the proceedings rehearsed.

As a family, it has not been distinguished for men who were leaders in thought. Not many of its members have been noted in the great political world or in professional or literary work, but they have figured more largely in the common walks of life. They have been looked upon in the communities where they have lived as reliable men and women, and, commencing with Richard[1] and his sons, they have frequently been placed in positions of trust in the town and church government in the places where they resided. In business circles, they have been exceptionally strong. They have loved the activities and excitements of commercial life and have very generally been successful as business men. They have been money-getters and money-keepers, and while until recent times not many of them have been rich, they have generally been in comfortable circumstances. Now, many of the name are wealthy.

Richard Kemball[1] was a wheelwright in England, as many Kembolds before him had been, and in every generation of his descendants, we find numbers following the same occupation. Even at the present time, some members of the family are largely interested in the business.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

We have been greatly helped in the publication of the book by a large subscription for copies made by the late William S. Kimball of Rochester, N. Y.

To Hon. John Kimball of Concord, N. H., Col. Robert J. Kimball of New York and Randolph, Vt., W. W. Kimball of Chicago, Ill., Capt. F. M. Kimball of Topeka, Kansas, and to Roy T. Kimball, Esq., of San Francisco, Cal., we are under obligations for a liberal patronage for copies, and for historical matter furnished us. To Major-General John Shaw Kemball of Fairseat, Wrotham, Seven Oaks, Co. of Kent, England, and his brother, Charles G. Kemball, of Cranley Gardens, South Kensington, London, England, and the late Lewis Kimball of Nashua, N. H., and many others, our thanks are due for interesting and valuable information. To George H. Kimball of Cleveland, Ohio, Harry P. Hammond of Concord N. H., and especially to Miss Sarah Louise Kimball of Oakland, California, and to Thomas D. Kimball of St. Louis, we wish to return our thanks for aid and assistance in preparing this history. We are particularly grateful to Perley Derby and Alfred Poor, of Salem, Mass., for the use of their valuable manuscripts, placed at our disposal. And to all who have in any way helped us in any manner in this unremunerative task, our thanks are rendered. Without their aid, the undertaking would have been almost impossible. To those who have furnished engravings of themselves and others, we, with those of the present and future generations, will be grateful.

This "History of the Kimball Family" greatly exceeds in size and amount of research the work we expected to prepare when we commenced it.

The task is now finished, and we offer the work, as a memorial, to the members of the family, who may therein find how their ancestors have assisted in building up this country. To historians, it will be interesting as showing the wanderings of the descendants of the early settlers of Massachusetts Bay, and it may serve to assist local recorders in determining the origin of a portion of their population.

LEONARD ALLISON MORRISON.

SUPPLEMENTARY INTRODUCTION.

My friend Morrison wishes me to say a few words in relation to my part of the present work. Brought up among the Friends of Southern Pennsylvania, one of the earliest maxims instilled into my mind was never to be idle, never to waste time that could be usefully employed. Some years ago, I was appointed by the Governor of Massachusetts, Assayer of Liquors for the Commonwealth. This office involved much waiting around the courts. I soon found that there was a rich mine of genealogical matter hidden away in the old records at Salem, Mass. A casual remark dropped at a Thanksgiving dinner by some one of my father-in-law's family, "that they knew nothing of their ancestors, except that they thought that they came from somewhere in New Hampshire or Massachusetts," gave me something to work upon. I began by trying, with aid of the documents on file at Salem and some town histories, to see if I could find out anything in regard to the New England ancestors of my children. After a year's work at such odd times as would have been otherwise wasted, I was able to say that I could trace every one of their ancestors back to 1720, and most of them back to 1630. In doing this I had accumulated considerable material. Perley Derby of Salem, Mass., seeing that I was interested in the matter, placed in my hands a lot of material that he had collected with regard to the Kimball family, with the remark that I might have it. It was an almost hopeless task to straighten it out. He had already used part of it in the preparation of a memorial of James Kimball. I found on examination of this mass of material, that I had the foundation for some work, and as an exercise in genealogical work, I tried to see what I could do with it. Shortly after this, Alfred Poor of Salem, Mass., placed at my disposal a number of notes he had made in regard to the Kimballs of Bradford, Haverhill, and Groveland, Mass., and also some relating to the Kimballs of southern New Hampshire. These I found of great value.

They were made between 1850 and 1860. Mr. Poor made several genealogical trips and interviewed every person whom he thought could give him any information. The material thus collected is still in a great measure undigested. It is a mine of wealth to those who wish to explore the families of the region mentioned. I have visited personally every probate office in eastern Massachusetts; I have either visited or caused to be visited every probate office in New Hampshire, and have had abstracts of all the wills found therein made, so that I could trace as far as possible the movements of the family. I have also visited all the town records in Essex county, with one or two exceptions, and in these cases I have had the records examined. All this has involved several thousand letters and nearly ten years of work. Kimballs have been written to in all parts of the country, but I am sorry to say that I cannot commend the family as good letter-writers. It is not their habit to write a letter to-day that can be put off till to-morrow. Still there have been notable exceptions to this, and I have had many pleasant letters from members of the family in the course of the work. I have done my best to have the genealogical matter of this work correct, but I am conscious that there are still many errors in it. In some cases, we are still in the dark. While I think every one who looks into the matter will be convinced that the Kimballs of York county, Me., are descendants of Richard Kimball[1] of Ipswich, so far I have been unable to prove this, but the traditions are that they came from Ipswich, and the given names are the same.

While at times the task has been a weary one, on the whole it has been pleasant, and I return my thanks to many members of the family who have assisted me. I wish also to acknowledge my indebtedness to the many town histories which I have consulted and to the published genealogies that have been used in the work.

CHAPTER I.

The Kemballs of England—The Early Home of the Kemballs is Found—Visit to Hitcham and Buxhall—Gen. Kemball of England—Letter of Charles Gordon Kemball—Change of Orthography—Extracts From English Wills—Records of Hitcham, England—Early Orthography of the Name—Kemball and Kemble, Different Names—The Arms.

Previous to 1889 all that was known in regard to the Kemballs who came to this country, was, that they came from Ipswich, England, in the ship Elizabeth, William Andrews, master. In the list of passengers by this ship, we find the names of Henry and Richard Kemball, who have been supposed to be brothers, because they came over on the same ship and settled in the town of Watertown. There is no evidence that they were so related. They did not settle in the same part of Watertown, but three miles apart. Matters were in this state in 1889 when Mr. Morrison resolved to make a trip to England and Europe. During this trip he obtained positive evidence in regard to the parish from which Richard Kemball[1], his wife, Ursula Scott, and his brother-in-law, Thomas Scott, came. The way that he obtained possession of this evidence, is perhaps best explained by the following letter, received from him in answer to some inquiries which I made of him regarding the home of the Kemballs:

To Stephen P. Sharples:

Dear Sir: In accordance with the design formed by me, when I left America, I made arrangements while in London to visit Ipswich, in Suffolk county, and to see if I could find any clues which would enable me to trace to the home parish the ancestor of the Kimballs of America. While making researches and during frequent visits to Somerset House, in London, I met Henry F. Waters, the accredited agent of the New England Historic Genealogical Society of Boston, Mass., who has made many researches and valuable historical discoveries in old England relating to New England families. He told me that he had made some investigations in the public records in Suffolk county, and had found frequent mention of the Kemballs who lived in several parishes in the vicinity of Bury St. Edmunds. The scraps of information which he had about them he placed at my disposal. Chief among these was the will of Henry Scott of Rattlesden. This will proved beyond a doubt that Richard Kemball[1] married Ursula Scott, and showed that Henry Scott lived in the parish of Rattlesden. Mr. Waters was strongly of the opinion that Rattlesden might also prove to be the home of Richard Kemball[1], who came to America in 1634, but of this he had no absolute proof. Going to Ipswich, I consulted the records in the District Register's office, and found that the Kemballs had lived for some hundreds of years in Rattlesden, Buxhall, Hitcham, and other parishes to the south of Bury St. Edmunds. Among the recent records were found the wills of Richard and Henry Kemball of Bury St. Edmunds.

THE EARLY HOME OF THE KEMBALLS IS FOUND.

At Bury St. Edmunds, I also examined the records. Enough was found to convince me that Rattlesden was an important place which should be visited. I proceeded to Stowe Market, and from there was conveyed to Rattlesden, five miles away. Late on a sunny afternoon I reached that quaint little hamlet and called at the rectory to see the rector of the parish, Rev. Mr. Barney, since deceased, who was custodian of the records, which extended back to 1558. I made arrangements with him to consult the records the next morning. The rectory is pleasantly situated amid the old trees of the glebe. The church stands near the rectory, is a good looking edifice of stone, and seems to be a modern structure. From there I wandered into the village of Rattlesden. It is a small, straggling hamlet, pleasantly situated in a gently sloping valley. The roofs of many of the houses are covered with tiles. It is in an agricultural district, and the fields on the sloping sides of the surrounding hills look productive and pleasant.

There is no hotel in the village, and I was a guest at what is called a "Public," known as "The Five Bells," kept by a Mrs. Moore. It was the only place of entertainment. In the evening the village schoolmaster, a soldier who had served in the Crimea and in India, and other dignitaries of the village congregated in the small sitting-room, seated themselves on the wooden benches around the table, where they smoked, told stories, discussed politics, and drank their whiskey or ale, after the manner of Tam O'Shanter and his cronies, in the manner that has probably been followed for hundreds of years. It was a new phase of life to me, and a very entertaining one, giving as it did a glimpse at old English customs. Promptly at ten o'clock the house was closed and the guests of the evening repaired to their several homes.

My slumbers in the parish of my forefathers were sweet and refreshing. In the morning I went again to the rectory, to study the ancient records, and examine them from 1558 to 1660. I found the baptism of Henry[2], son of Richard and Ursula Kemball[1], as follows: "Henry Kemball ye Sonne of Richard and Ursula his wife baptized xii, Aug. 1615." There were many other evidences of the connection of the Kemballs with this place. After a close examination of the records, I bade the very eccentric old rector farewell, and started for Hitcham. We passed up a steep hill out of the village. The highway led through tall hedges till we reached the summit, a broad plateau, from which there was a good prospect of the surrounding country. Large fields were enclosed by high hawthorne hedges. Numerous tall trees showed the division lines between different owners. The country was pleasing to the eye. It was the harvest season, and from the hill overlooking Rattlesden, with its church, its straggling houses with their roofs of tile and thatch, we could view the country around, with its fields of ripening grain and broad expanses of clover in full bloom, which undulated in the breezes and filled the air with its aroma.

Through scenes like this, over a smooth, hard road, winding among and over the hills, I rode to Hitcham. A few days before I arrived at this place, Thomas Kemball, an aged citizen of Hitcham, had died. Going to the rectory I had the pleasure of meeting the very genial and courteous rector, Rev. A. R. Grant. He placed his parish records at my disposal, showed me every attention, and rendered me all the personal assistance possible. It gives me pleasure to here acknowledge my grateful appreciation of his kindness. In these records I found abundant evidence that the Kemballs had long been residents of the place. It was an old hive of the family. The next place I visited was Buxhall, where the Rev. Mr. Hill was rector; he very kindly placed the parish books at my disposal. I examined the records but found nothing of importance. Few of the Kemballs had lived there.

After returning to London, by correspondence I made the acquaintance of Major-Gen. J. S. Kemball of the British army.* His residence is Fairseat, Wrotham, Seven Oaks, County of Kent, England. I afterwards had an interesting correspondence with him on my return to the United States. He had recently hunted up the ancestry of his family, and had traced it to Hitcham. He had the Hitcham and other records copied, and he sent them to me after my return to this country. His brother, Charles Gurdon Kemball, sent with these records an interesting letter, which I enclose.

*The Kimballs lived chiefly in the southwest of Suffolk county, and the old parish registers and the churchyards of the parishes of Rattlesden, Hitcham, Groton, Boxford, Bildeston, and Felsham are full of the names of Kemballs.

The William Kemball born in 1623, mentioned in the following letter, was a lad eleven years of age when Richard Kemball[1] left Rattlesden and emigrated to America.

Respectfully yours,
LEONARD A. MORRISON.

"15 CRANLEY GARDENS,
SOUTH KENSINGTON,
LONDON S. W.
March 4, 1890.

Leonard A. Morrison, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR: I have at last succeeded in getting most of the papers out of the Heralds College, and those that I have I have had copied on their paper and now send you, without waiting for the remainder, which from my past experience of the Heralds College, I fear I may not get for some time. I am afraid that the copies I am enclosing may not prove of much use, but probably they will be interesting reading to you. What the remaining papers are which the College promised to return later on I do not know, but if I find that they may be of interest to you I will send copies also of them. You will see that our family name is variously spelt, apparently "according to the taste and fancy of the speller," as Sam Weller would have said. I think that the original name was undoubtedly "Kymbolde." I don't know whether you have a map of Suffolk by you; if not you may be interested in hunting up the different villages and towns named, and I therefore enclose one. Apparently our family lived exclusively in the west of the county, inclining more to the south than the north. We, i. e., my two brothers and I, have been concerned simply with our own pedigree, and have been content to commence with a great-great-great-grandfather, William Kemball, who was born in 1623, who was the father of William Kemball of Hitcham who died in 1702, leaving a son, Rev. William Kemball of Brandon, a curate of Dowerham, in the N. W. of Suffolk. The latter had thirty-two children, of whom my grandfather, Vero Kemball, of Hitcham, was the youngest. This Vero married Letitia Philippa Gurdon, daughter of the rector of Apington, in the S. W. of the county. At my brother General Kemball's request I enclose you his photograph for your acceptance. I am afraid I have not afforded you much useful information, but if there is anything I can, in your opinion, do for you, I am at your service. I am, Dear Sir,

Yours very truly,
C. G. KEMBALL."

CHANGE OF ORTHOGRAPHY.

With this letter were a number of abstracts of wills, registers of birth, death and marriage. Only a few of these will be given, only enough being quoted to show the changes that the name underwent in England before the family came to this country. Since coming to this country the descendants of Richard Kemball[1] have very generally changed the spelling of the name by substituting "i" for "e", and "Kemball" has become "Kimball"; this change took place very soon after they emigrated. On the other hand, the descendants of Henry Kemball, until the beginning of this century, always spelled the name Kemball.

EXTRACTS OF ENGLISH WILLS.

The first will to be quoted is that of "Henry Kymbolde", dated 16 Aug. 1524:—

"I Henry Kymbolde the younger of Hecham in the Countye of Suff." "to be buryed in the Churcheyard of Hecham." "To John Kymbolde my sonne one of my bullocke" "to Margaret Kymbolde my Doughter another bullocke" Residue of Goods to "Agnes myne Wyff". "Annes Kymbolde my wyff and Thomas Kymbold the elder my ffather of Hecham" "Ext$^{x}$ & Ex$^{or}$" proved March 14, 1523–4.

In the second will we have the name of Richard Kymbolde appearing. The Henry of this will may have been the uncle of Henry of the first will:—

6 July 1526 "I Henry Kymbolde of Hecham in ye Countye of Suff" "I wyll that Rychard Kymbolde my sonne" shall have my house that I dwell in called Brakys" Also "My tenement called Warrens". Mentions Thomas Kymbolde his sonne, "Peter Kymbolde his son." "Elizabeth, his youngest daughter. "Wyll that Henry Kymbolde to have my tenement called Pokellys with a crofte, called "Halles croft", and another croft called "Swymer field". Mentions Maryon his wyff, doughter Agnes Lookwood doughter Elizabeth Bantofte, Henry Bantofte his godson, Esall Lokwood "my goddoughter" Thomas Bendyche my godsonne" Anne Bendyche my Doughter" "Robert Rowsse my godsonne" "myne wyff, Richard Kymbolde my sonne and Leonard Lokwood Ex$^{tr}$ & Ex$^{ors}$" Robert Rowss of Hadley Supervisor. Witnesses Henry Todd, Thomas Bantofte Thomas Wettm and Geffrey Tamnat.

On Jan. 4, 1558, Henry Kembold of Hechm Leaves to his wfe the tenement that he dwells in called "Pogelles". This Henry is evidently the son of Henry mentioned above. But he spells his name "Kem" instead of "Kym". The spelling of "Pokelles" is also changed. He also mentions "Halls Crofte" and "Swynesfield" which he gives to "Harrye Kembolde his son. To Thomas Kembolde his son he gives a piece of land in "Rattlesden" called "Hodges Medowe". He also leaves property to his son Richard Kimball, mentions his daughters Agnes and Margaret. He gives to Henry and Thomas all my "Toles and tymbar" "My horse myll with all that do belonge to it to Herrye Kembold my son after my wyffes decease".

His wife "Cicelie Kembolde of Hitcham wedowe" made a will which was proved, Dec, 8, 1582, in this she mentions her three sons Henry Thomas and Richard. She mentions Priscilla Kembolde daughter of Henry Kembolde. She calls her daughter Margaret Pricke.

The last will that I shall quote is that of Richard Kembolde the elder of Hitcham. This is interesting on account of the very full list of his descendants. He was the brother of Henry Kembolde, whose will was made in 1558, and son of Henry whose will was made in 1626. His wife was Agnes, and he wills as follows:—

"To my eldest sonne Henrye Kembolde £10." "to my grand Children Thomas Kembolde and Henrye Kembolde my said sonne Henries two sonnes 40s/ each and to Ellen Kembolde and Elizabeth Tarvar the two daughters of the said Henrye my eldest sonne 20s/—each" "to the eldest childe of the saide Elizabeth Tarvar 20s/ when 21. "to Edmunde Kembolde my sonne £5. to enye of the children of the saide Edmunde my sonne 40s/ when 21, To Adam Ransone of Monkeselye" "to enye one of the children of the saide Adam Ransone 40s/ when 21. "To Richard Ransone, Thomas Ransone, and John Ransone brethren of the afore named Adam Ransone £3. and to Wittm Ransone ther brother 40s/" "Unto my daughter Marrion Harper the mother of the above named Ransons 20s/ "to Elenor Kilham my daughter 40s "to my godsonne Richarde Kilham, her sonne 40s/ when 21. "to Alice Clinche her daughter and to her eldest sonne Wittm Clinche 40s/ apiece. To my grande childe Steven Kembolde of Bildestone £5. "to Agnes Hart my daughter of Monkselye £5. "to John Hart and Thomas Hart sonnes of my aforesaide Daughter Agnes Hart £3. apiece.

To my Daughter Brame of Chelesworth 401s/ and to her dawghter Alice Brame 40s/ "to my dawghter Elizabeth Webbe of Nawton 10s/ and a load of wood a year for life." to her sonne Robte Webb. £5. to her sonne Thomas Webbe £5. to Nicholas Webbe my Daughters thirde sonne 20 Noble when 21. "to Rachell Webbe, Margaret Webbe and Janne her three Daughters £5 apiece. they under 21, unto Joane Webbe and Elizabeth Webbe £4 apiece "40s/ to be bestowed upon my daughter Haynes. to enye one of my saide Dawghter Haynes her children £3 apiece when 21.

In these wills the constant repetition of the names Henry, Richard, and Thomas is particularly to be noticed. Peter Kembolde of Bury St. Edmund, brother to the above Richard, leaves his property to Henry Kembold of Brettenham, his nephew, to Marion Ransonne, the daughter of Richard Kembold, and to Peter, the son of Edmonde Kembolde, and others.

RECORDS OF HITCHAM, ENGLAND—EARLY ORTHOGRAPHY OF THE NAME.

Turning now to the baptisms in Hitcham we will select from the long list a few to show the spelling of the name:—

1583 April 14. Petrus Kembould filius Edmunde Kemb.
1606 May 4 Stephanus Kembould filius Petri Kembolde.
1609 May 7 Rosa Kimbold filia Petri Kimbold.
1611 May 19, Adamus Kembolde filius Petri Kembolde.
1613–14 Feb. 20. Dorathea Kembolde filia Petri Kembolde.
1615–16 Richardus Kembolde filius Petri Kembolde.
1617 May 11, Johana Kembolde filia Petri Kembolde.

1617 Nov. 5. Abigala Kembold filia Richardi Kembolde.

1617–18 Johannis Kembolde filius Petri Kembolde.

1621 Sept. 2, Abratia Kemball filius Petri Kemball. This is the first entry in which the name has its modern spelling. After this date the spelling is almost uniformly Kemball, although in a few instances the variation Kemboll is found, and as late as 1655 and '57 a few instances of reversion to the original form occur; for instance, in 1657, is the entry, Abigill Kembould daughter of William Kembould, born Dec. 30.

Whether the Abigala Kembold mentioned as born in 1617 was the daughter of Richard, the emigrant, we do not know, but she was of about the right age. We think that, in conclusion, we can safely say that the names of Kemball and Kemble have been distinct names for at least four hundred years and that there is no evidence that they were ever the same. The Kemballs have lived in Suffolk county for at least four hundred years. They have always belonged to the so-called middle class in England. On the other hand, the Kembles have lived in Wiltshire even longer. They have a coat of arms and belong to the nobility. Only one family of Kembles was early in New England, and their descendants have ceased to exist, in the male line. I have made a careful investigation in regard to this family, and their history is given in an appendix to this work. There were two families of Kembles early in New Jersey. About these I have been able to ascertain but little, still I have a few letters from their descendants. They claim to belong to the same family as the celebrated English actors. Peter Kemble was very prominent previous to the Revolution; he was wealthy, was a member of the Governor's Council, and his daughter married General Gage of the British army.

Of late years several of the Kemballs have occupied distinguished positions in the British army. The most distinguished of these is General Sir Arnold Burrowes Kemball, who was born in 1820, son of Arnold Kemball, Esq. For long services in the East he was given the rank of Knight Commander of the Star of India in 1866. He was made a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath in 1878. He has passed through the various grades in the British army, from Lieutenant in 1837, to that of General.

THE ARMS.

So far as we can ascertain the Kemballs have never had a coat of arms. Several so-called coats of arms have been published in this country. One of these is in existence in Salem, Mass. It is one of the manufactures of the notorious John Coles. Another one which was published in connection with the history of the Joseph Kimball family, by Hon. John Kimball of Concord, N. H., is very nicely printed and certified to. A long search through various works on Heraldry fails to reveal any such coat of arms. We print it, and it is here inserted for what it is worth. If the family choose to adopt it we do not know of any reason why they should not.

COAT OF ARMS.

"FROM THE HERALD'S COLLEGE, LONDON."

The family of Kimball is from the County of Cumberland, England, and takes its origin from a parish of that name upon the Scottish border.

The arms are,—Argent (silver), a lion rampant; gules (red), upon a chief (sable), three crescents of gold. The crest is a lion rampant, holding in the dexter paw a dagger, au propre (natural color).

Motto, "Fortis non Ferox."

Kimball.

CHAPTER II.

Henry Kemball[1] of Watertown, Mass., and His Descendants.

As Henry Kemball[1] was the oldest of the two emigrants we will give his family first. It is remarkable that while the descendants of Richard Kimball[1] are almost numberless, those of Henry Kemball were represented by a single male in each generation until after the marriage of Henry Kemball[5] and Elizabeth Wellington in 1783. She introduced new vigor into the race. She had five sons, and died at the age of ninety-four.

HENRY KEMBALL.[1]

In writing of Henry Kemball[1] and his descendants we shall retain the original spelling of the name. Henry always signed his name in this way, and his descendants have mainly kept up the practice until within sixty years.

1 Henry Kemball[1], b. perhaps at Lawford, in the county of Essex, England, son of Richard Kemball of Lawford, wheelwright. Richard's will was proved Sept. 10, 1619. He gives to "my elldest sonne Henry Kemball all my worken Tooles belongeinge to my trad Except out of them as many as shall be fittinge for to searue to axe a cart withall." All the rest of his estate he leaves to his wife, Elizabeth, with the condition that as a "mother shee shall see all my children vertiouslye broughte upp, in the feare of God, according to her poore estate and Abilitye." Henry, the emigrant, may have been the Henry mentioned in the above will. This is, however, a matter of conjecture. We do know, however, that at one time he lived in the adjoining parish, for Henry Kemball of Mistley singleman and Susan Cutting widow of the parish of Great Bromley were married Nov. 27, 1628. Susan Cutting was the widow of Richard Cutting. Richard Cutting and Susan Stone were married Aug. 3, 1620, at Great Bromley. "Richard Cuttinge, the sonne of Richard Cuttinge, was baptized the sixth day of ffebruarie 1621."

Susan Cuttinge, the daughter of Richard Cuttinge and Susan his wife was bap: the xjth of September 1625. The will of Richard Cutting of "Much Bromley" July 27, 1627, mentions his wife Susan and his children Richard and Susan. Richard came with his mother to this country and settled in Watertown, Mass. His descendants are given in Bond's History of Watertown. Henry Kemball died in 1648. His inventory is dated July 22, 1648. His homestead in Watertown was situated near the corner of what are now Belmont and Common streets. He also owned land in other parts of the town.

Henry Kemball's widow, Susan, married for her third husband one Loe or Low. She survived him and died Aug. 19, 1684, aged 86.

At a court appointed 1651, Thomas Straite acknowledged that he had received his wife Elizabeth's share of her father's estate. John Randall also acknowledged that he had received Susanna's share.

In Bond's Watertown three more children are given as belonging to Henry. This careless error is also found in Savage's Dictionary. They were the children of Henry and Mary (Wyatt) Kimball of Wenham, Mass., as shown by the Watertown records. This Henry Kimball[2] was the son of Richard Kimball[1], and for some time after he was married he lived in Watertown, Mass. After the birth of these three children he moved to Ipswich and then to Wenham, Mass.

CHAPTER III.

Richard Kimball[1] and His Descendants—Will of Henry Scott—Will of Richard Kimball.

The common ancestor of the great majority of Kimballs in this country was Richard Kimball[1], who with his family embarked at Ipswich, in the county of Suffolk, England, April 10, 1634, in the ship Elizabeth, William Andrews, master. After braving the dangers of the ocean voyage he arrived in Boston harbor, and from thence went to Watertown, Mass. He had left the comforts and ties and oppressions of old England to find for himself and children a home in the New World. It was to him a land of promise, a land of religious and political liberty, a land to which the longing eyes of the dwellers in old Suffolk were turning as fondly as did the eyes of the ancient Hebrews turn in their captivity to the promised land of Canaan. As the Israelites passed through the "Wilderness" and through the deep waters of affliction to reach their haven of rest, so these sturdy Puritans, with their families, with undaunted hearts, broke loose from the ties of friendship, left the graves of their forefathers, passed over the wilderness of waters and reached the Canaan of their hopes. An ocean now rolled between them and their early home, and in a new and savage country, and in another hemisphere, they started a new home. They helped to make the beginnings of a New England and lay the foundations of a rival to the Old England across the sea. They were of that Puritan stock which has in its turn made New England the mother of the great West, the sturdy stock which only needs to be convinced that it is right in order to do and dare all that is noblest. A stock that found a wilderness peopled with a few savages, a climate that would have killed a less hardy race, a soil that is far from fertile, and yet out of these untoward circumstances wrested success. They came when the throes of revolution were agitating the mother country, when the conflict between the adherents of the Established Church and the Puritans, between the King and the people, was at its height, and when the principles of civil rights and religious liberty were struggling for existence in England.

James I., after a feeble reign, had expired March 27, 1625. His son, the ill-starred Charles I., had succeeded him. Fires were smouldering in England which would soon burst forth into devouring flames. In 1629 Charles I. dissolved the last of three Parliaments, and for the next eleven years attempted to rule England by his absolute power. In 1634 the king made his journey to Scotland, in order to hold a Parliament, and by a statute compel the Scottish people to worship by Episcopal rule. A very difficult task, which no king, though backed by the power of the church, could accomplish. He made William Laud Archbishop of Canterbury, whose office was an object of aversion to the Puritans. Under his authority every corner of the kingdom was subjected to a minute inspection, and every little band of Separatists or Puritans, as their adversaries called them, was tracked out and broken up, even the religious ceremonies of private families did not escape the vigilance of his spies. Deadly hatred of the Established Church and of the king as its head was thus engendered in thousands of homes.

These acts rendered England so uncomfortable that the Puritans were compelled to seek a home elsewhere. They, therefore, sought a dwelling place in the wilderness of the new world, and they called their new home, in loving remembrance of the old home from which they came, New England. Here they sought the right to worship God unmolested by bishops. There was but little opposition to the first emigration, but three years later, in 1637, by an order of the king and council, eight vessels lying in the Thames and ready to sail, freighted with Puritans, were detained. In these vessels were embarked Sir Arthur Hazelrig, John Hampden, John Pym, and Oliver Cromwell, the Great Protector, who afterwards signed the death warrant of King Charles, in 1649. Such was the condition of affairs in England, and such the insults, persecutions, and wrongs heaped upon the Puritans in 1634, which the proud spirits of many could not brook, but in the wilds of New England they sought out a home in which they might be free.

The leaders in the exodus were many of them men of influence in England, and they brought with them many men of the middle classes, who were also tired of the tyranny and exactions to which they were subjected. To this class belonged the sturdy wheelwright, Richard Kemball[1]. He had a trade which would be eminently useful in the new colony. His services were in such request that he was soon called to leave his first settlement at Watertown and go to Ipswich, where he was given a house lot, and other privileges, on condition that he should be the town wheelwright.

RICHARD KIMBALL.[1]

Richard Kemball[1] came to this country in the ship Elizabeth, William Andrews, master, in 1634. He appears to have gone, soon after landing, to Watertown, Mass. He settled in a different part of the town from that occupied by Henry Kemball[1]. According to Bond and other writers Richard and Henry were brothers. There is but little evidence to support this supposition, and it seems to be mainly founded on the fact that they both came over on the same vessel. Richard is said on the shipping list to be thirty-nine years old, but he was probably somewhat older. He was, however, in the prime of life, and soon became a prominent and active man in the new settlement.

He first settled in Watertown, and his home lot is thus given by Dr. Henry Bond: Richard Kimball, six acres, bounded on the north by Cambridge, east by land of W. Hamlet, south by the highway, and west by land of Edward White.

This lot was situated a long way from the centre of the town. It is now in Cambridge, which many years ago annexed the eastern part of Watertown. The lot was situated near what is now the corner of Huron avenue and Appleton street, and near springs of water.

He was proclaimed freeman in 1635, May 6. Was a proprietor in 1636–7. Soon after this date he was invited to remove to Ipswich, where they were in need of a competent man to act as wheelwright to the new settlement. Here he spent the remainder of his days. The town granted him a house lot, Feb. 23, 1637, next adjoining Goodwin Simons at the west end of the town. He was also granted at the same time "40 acres Beyond the North Riuer, near the land of Robert Scott." In 1639 he had liberty to pasture "two cows free." On "the last day of the last month 1641" he is mentioned as "Among the Commoners of Ipswich." He was appointed one of the seven men March 1, 1645. On the 22d day of the tenth mo. 1647 he was allowed two Pounds for killing two foxes.

His services as wheelwright were appreciated by his townspeople, for he was permitted in January, 1649, "to fell such white Oaks as he hath occasion to use about his trade for the town use."

December 19, 1648, he contributed with others three shillings as his annual proportion towards the sum of £27, 7s, as a rate for the services of their military leader, Major David Dennison, then commander of the military forces of Essex and Norfolk counties.

In September, 1652, he was one of the appraisers of the estate of John Cross, one of the earliest settlers of Ipswich.

On the 25, day 11mo 1652, he and his son Richard, Wheelwrights, "for £14. sell 30 acres upland bounding on land of Mr. John Winthrop," also another lot of land of ten acres of "medow".

In 1653 he was one of a committee of three to survey fences in the common fields north of the river. His brother-in-law Thomas Scott died Feb. 1653–4 and he was joint executor with Edmund Bridges of his will. On May 25, 1654, their official position was recognized by Thomas Scott, Jr., then a resident of Stamford, Conn.

In 1660 he was granted right "to fell 20 white oak trees to make weels for the townsmen their use." In 1664 he owned 43 shares in Plumb Island.

Richard Kimball was of the parish of Rattlesden, county of Suffolk, England, as is shown by the following entry on the parish register:

Henry Kemball ye sonne of Richard and Vrsula his wife baptized 1615 12 of August.

Ursula was the daughter of Henry Scott of Rattlesden, as appears from the following extract from Henry Scott's will:

"To Abigale Kemball my grandchild twentie shillings to be paid at 21 to Henrie Kemball my grandchild twenty shillings to be paid at 21 to Elizabeth Kemball my grandchild twenty shillings to be paid at 21 to Richard Kemball my grandchild twenty shillings to be paid at 21." He also mentions his wife Martha, and sons Roger and Thomas Scott. Thomas Scott came with his wife and children to this country in the same vessel as Richard and his family, and they brought Martha Scott with them. This will was made 24 Sept. 1625 In the 21st year of James of England by Henry Scott of Rattlesden in the Co. of Suffolk and diocese of Norwich. It was proved in the court of the Arch deacon of Sudbury 10 January 1624–5. As Thomas Scott settled in Ipswich this may have had some influence in causing Richard's removal from Watertown. Henry Scott was buried at Rattlesden, Dec. 24, 1624. (Parish Register.)

Richard Kimball married second, Oct. 23, 1661, Margaret Dow, widow of Henry Dow of Hampton, N. H.

Signed & sealed after the enterlining (and firewood) in the seventh line in the originall yn the presence of Moses Pengry Senr.
Aron Pengry Ser.

This will is proved in court held at Ypswich the 28th of Sept: 1675. by the oaths of Deacon Pengry And Aron Pengry to be the last will of Richard Kimball to the best of yr knowledge and that they know of noe other.
Attest Robert Lord cler.

Moses and Aaron Pengry were prominent citizens of Ipswich. The marriage settlement of Sarah Pengry, daughter of Moses, is on record at Salem, Mass. She married John, son of Robert

Day, and three of her children married three children of Benjamin Kimball[2] of Bradford, Mass.

Having thus made his will he waited for the coming of the messenger who would sunder all earthly ties and take him on his eternal journey. The angel delayed not long his coming. On the twenty-second of the following June the earthly pilgrimage of Richard Kimball ended, and, aged more than eighty years, he joined the great majority.

His wife did not long survive him, but died the succeeding spring, March 1, 1676. Richard Kimball[1] was well to do for those early days. The inventory of his estate, which was taken July 12, 1675, and returned to court Sept. 28, 1675, amounted to £737 3s. 6d. He had already given to his children at their marriages.

CHILDREN.

i. Abigail[2], b. Rattlesden, county of Suffolk, England; d. in Salisbury, Mass., June 17, 1658. She married in England John Severans, b. ——, d. April 9, 1682, of Salisbury, Mass., who is first styled a planter, afterwards a victualler and vinter. She is not mentioned in the list of passengers, with the others of her father's family, on the Elizabeth. She was in the prime of life at the time of her death. Mr. Severans married, second, Oct. 2, 1663, Susanna, widow of Henry Ambrose. Mr. Ambrose, after having lived in Hampton, N. H., Salisbury, Charlestown, and Boston, died in Boston in 1658.

CHILDREN OF ABIGAIL KIMBALL AND JOHN SEVERANS.

i. Samuel Severans[3], b. Sept. 19, 1637; d. young.
ii. Ebenezer Severans[3], b. March 7, 1639; d. 1667; unmarried.
iii. Abigail Severans[3], b. Jan. 7, 1641; d. Sept. 1, 1642.
iv. Abigail Severans[3], b. May 25, 1643; m. Nov. 29, 1664, John Church.
v. Mary Severans[3], b. Aug. 5, 1645; m. Nov. 3, 1663, James Coffin of Nantucket.
vi. John Severans[3], b. Nov. 24, 1647; m. Mary ——.
vii. Joseph Severans[3], b. Feb. 14, 1649–50.
viii. Elizabeth Severans[3], b. April 8, 1652; d. Feb. 5, 1652–3.
ix. Benjamin Severans[3], b. Jan. 13, 1654–5.
x. Ephraim Severans[3], b. April 8, 1656.
xi. Dau. b. June 17, 1658; d. June 23, 1658.

xii. Elizabeth Severans[3], b. June 17, 1658; m. 1686, Samuel Eastman of Salisbury. Her granddaughter, Abigail Eastman[5], b. July 10, 1737, daughter of Thomas[4] and Abigail (French) Eastman, m. Ebenezer Webster and was the mother of Daniel Webster[6], the statesman.

2 ii. Henry Kimball[2], b. Rattlesden, Suffolk county, England. There seems to be some doubt as to Henry's exact age. It is given on the shipping list as aged fifteen, in 1634. This would give the year of his birth as 1619. But it is evident that the ages on the shipping list are only approximate. Henry himself deposes in court, Sept. 28, 1669, that he is aged 53. This would give the year of his birth as 1616. But the parish records at Rattlesden are as follows: "12, Aug, 1615 Henry Kemball ye sone of Richard and Vrsula his wife baptized."

iii. Elizabeth Kimball[2], b. Rattlesden, 1621. There is no record of her marriage. She was alive in 1675.

3 iv. Richard Kimball[2], b. Rattlesden, Eng., 1623; d. May 26, 1676, in Wenham, Mass.

v. Mary Kimball[2], b. Rattlesden, Eng., 1625; m. Robert Dutch of Gloucester and Ipswich, Mass. Mary is wrongly given in many places as the wife of Deacon Thomas Knowlton, historians being misled by her father's will, as he only mentions the first names of his daughters and does not leave anything to the children of Mary. But in an action for trespass against Richard Kimball, Sr., (in taking a heifer by his grandson Robert Dutch of the yard of Obadiah Wood and detaining the same Mar. 1662), this is shown to be wrong, Robert Dutch, Sr.'s wife was Mary. Savage's Dictionary is wrong in regard to her name. It says she was Mary Roper, daughter of Walter Roper. But Mary Roper was born in 1641. Mary Dutch says in a deposition that she is 36 in 1665, which would give her birth as 1629. Samuel Dutch calls Caleb Kimball[2] uncle in deposition in 1664.

CHILDREN OF MARY KIMBALL[2] AND ROBERT DUTCH.

i. John Dutch[3], b. May 1, 1646; living in 1686.
ii. Robert Dutch[3], b. June 2, 1647; m. Mary Roper.
iii. Samuel Dutch[3], b. June, 1650; living in 1686.
iv. Mary Dutch[3], b. 1652.
v. Caleb Dutch[3], b. May 1, 1659.
vi. Benjamin Dutch[3], b. Dec. 4, 1665; living in 1686.

vi. Martha Kimball[2], b. Rattlesden, Eng., 1629; m. Joseph, son of Phillip and Martha Fowler, who was born in England in 1622, and was killed by the Indians May 19, 1676, near Deerfield, Mass. He came to New England in the ship Mary, with his father, in 1634, and resided in Ipswich, Mass. He sold his father-in-law, Richard Kimball[1], forty acres of land in 1651.

CHILDREN OF MARTHA KIMBALL AND JOSEPH FOWLER.

i. Joseph Fowler[3], b. about 1647; m. Elizabeth Hutton.
ii. Philip Fowler[3], b. Dec. 25, 1648; m. Elizabeth Herrick. He was adopted by his grandfather, Philip Fowler, in 1651.
iii. John Fowler[3], b. about 1655; m. 2d, Hannah Scott.
iv. Mary Fowler[3], m. John Breen, Jan. 20, 1673–4.

A history of Martha Kimball's descendants is given in the "Fowler Family," by Matthew A. Stickney of Salem, Mass.

4 vii. John Kimball[2], b. Rattlesden, Eng., 1631; d. May 6, 1698.
5 viii. Thomas Kimball[2], b. 1633; d. May 3, 1676.
ix. Sarah Kimball[2], b. Watertown, Mass., 1635; d. June 12, 1690; m. Nov. 24, 1658, Edward Allen of Ipswich, Mass.

CHILDREN OF SARAH KIMBALL AND EDWARD ALLEN.

i. John Allen[3], b. Aug. 9, 1659; d. May 11, 1704.
ii. Sarah Allen[3], b. July 4, 1661; d. Feb. 10, 1661–2.
iii. Edward Allen[3], b. May 1, 1662; d. 1740.
iv. Sarah Allen[3], b. March 1, 1664.
v. Elizabeth Allen[3], b. Dec. 20, 1666.
vi. William Allen[3], b. March 12, 1668; d. 1702.
vii. Benjamin Allen[3], b. Sept., 1673.
viii. David Allen[3], b. Feb. 1, 1675–6.
ix. Abigail Allen[3], b. March 25, 1678.
x. Samuel Allen[3].
xi. Caleb Allen[3], b. Mar. 31, 1685.

6 x. Benjamin Kimball[2], b. Ipswich, 1637; d. June 11, 1695.
7 xi. Caleb Kimball[2], b. Ipswich, Mass., 1639; d. 1682.

SECOND GENERATION.

2 Henry Kimball[2] (Richard[1]) was born at Rattlesden, in the county of Suffolk, England, in 1615, and came to America in the ship Elizabeth with his father. He married, about 1640, Mary, daughter of John and Mary Wyatt, who came over in the same ship with him. She died in Wenham, Mass., Aug. 12, 1672. He married second, Elizabeth (Gilbert) Rayner, widow of William, son of Thurston Rayner, and daughter of Humphrey and Elizabeth Gilbert. William Rayner died Oct. 26, 1672.

Henry first settled in Watertown, Mass., and remained there after his father moved to Ipswich, but sometime after 1646 he followed his father to that place, and about 1655 he removed to Wenham, Mass., and spent the remainder of his life in that town.

November 8, 1657, he subscribed £3 as minister's rate, one-half in wheat, the other one-half in Indian corn, "at Marchant's price". In 1659 he subscribed £3.05s. one-half in corn, and in 1660–1 he contributed 10s. towards the new meeting house. He was chosen constable Oct. 22, 1669.

Henry gave several depositions in court, among which was one given 4[mo], 1665, wherein he states "that he never gave Goodman Symonds 5s & 6 pens a day for his boy and his bullockes, nor never did intend itt, and sins the last March Corte he came to me and tould me he would take but five shillings." In 1656 he complained against Thomas Smith of Ipswich on account of Smith's cows destroying his corn about two weeks before general training; the fence was broken down.

Henry deposes in 1669 that he was 53 years old. Henry's inventory was presented to court 16. 4[mo] (June) 1676. Among other items are the following: A house & 12 acres of land wh: was the widows before she married with him £40.00.00. A debt due from his son Caleb late deceased upon the acct. of house and land £25. To the Remainder of a legacy giuen him by his father yett in the executors hand about £40. To Bookes 5s. Total £177.12s. He died in Wenham in 1676. As is shown by the following agreement he left twelve children: At a court held at Ypswich the 26 of Sept. 1676 Richard and John Kimball sons of Henry Kimball deceased administering upon their ffather Henry Kemball's estate according to agreement between them and there mother in law doe engage to aquit there sd mother in law from all her late husband's proper debts and to discharge them out of there ffather's estate, they are also to pay to there mothere in law Elizabeth Kimball £15. for the bringing up of there younger sister Deborah out of wich the sayd mother is to pay the sd. Deborah £5. w[n] she come to age. And also the said Richard and John are to pay to there ten brothers & sisters fifty shillings a peece w[n] they come to age and the rest of the estate to be theres. Richard the eldest son to have a duble portion.

CHILDREN.

i. Mary[3], b. Watertown, Mass., Nov. 29, 1641.

8 ii. Richard[3], b. Watertown, Mass., Oct. 13, 1643. Resided in Wenham, Mass.

9 iii. John[3], b. Watertown, Mass., Dec. 25, 1645.

iv. Caleb[3], b. 1647, Ipswich, Mass. He was in the expedition commanded by Capt. Lathrop and was killed by the Indians at Bloody Brook during King Phillip's War. He was probably never married, as his estate was divided among his brothers and sisters. Administration was granted to his father Henry and his brother Richard. At the time of his father's death the estate was still unsettled, and Richard is directed to divide it among the twelve children of Henry. There was due from his estate to his father's estate, £25, as mentioned in his father's inventory. The total property according to the inventory was £50. Among the assets were 7 weeks' wages due fr. ye contry £12.2s. (Savage wrongly gives the Caleb that was killed at Bloody Brook as the son of Richard. The above notes will serve to show that it was Caleb, the son of Henry, who was killed. Caleb, the son of Richard, had two children born after this date, and did not die until 1682.)

v. Dorcas[3], b. about 1649; m. Dec. 1, 1668, Thomas Dow.

vi. Abigail[3], b. about 1652; m. May 14, 1673, John Wycome.

vii. Sarah, b. about 1654; m. May 3, 1675, Daniel Gage.

10 viii. Henry, b. about 1655. (Twenty-two in 1677.)

ix. Mehitable[3], b. Wenham, Mass., 1658; d. Dec. 7, 1689, in Bradford, Mass., aged 31. Her stone is the oldest in the old cemetery at that place. She married Thomas, son of William and Elizabeth Stickney, b. Rowley, Mass., 3, 1 mo. 1646; d. in Bradford, July 17, 1714, aged 68 years. Child: Mehitable Stickney, b. December 4, 1689; m. July 24, 1729, John Barker.

x. Benjamin, b. Wenham, Mass., Dec. 12, 1659.

11 xi. Joseph, b. Wenham, Jan. 20, 1661.

3 Richard Kimball[2] (Richard[1]) was born at Rattlesden, in the county of Suffolk, England, about 1623, and came to America in the ship Elizabeth with his father. He married twice, both his wives having Mary for a given name. It is probable that his second wife was named Mary Gott. His first wife died Sept. 2, 1672. He had eight children that were alive at the time of his death, as is shown by an agreement made between them and his widow. Their names are not given in the agreement. Several depositions of his are on file in the court records at Salem. In September, 1658, he says: "That his Uncle Thomas Scott of Ipswich challenged the upland down to the Marsh and his son after him while I lived on Goodman Shatswell's farm for seven years."

Richard Kimball of Wenham was grand juror in 1661.

Richard was of Topsfield in 1664. He was called a wheelwright and yeoman. He removed to Wenham between the years 1652 and 1656. He was the first settler of the name in Wenham. He settled in the western part of the town, near Ladd's hill. He appears to have been the largest taxpayer among the early settlers, and his descendants have generally been in comfortable circumstances. He was a large land holder, as is shown by numerous transactions recorded in Salem, Mass. On July 6, 1665, he sold to his brother Caleb, for £30, his house with one acre of land about it and six acres in the common field, all included in the bounds of Ipswich.

November 8, 1657, he subscribed £3 as minister's rate, to be paid one half in wheat and one half in Indian corn. The next year he was chosen selectman, in which office he continued, with the exception of three years, till 1674. Dec. 4, 1660, he was on the committee to see about building the new meeting house. The matter was deferred until Aug. 21, 1663, when the committee having at last agreed to build, he was one of the committee to join with the selectmen to put out the contract.

28, 12$^{mo}$ (Feb.) 1663, "'tis agreed yt there then shall be 200 Akers of land of ye best of our comon Leased to foure men for 1000 years: viz. to Abner Ordway, Thomas Searles, John Edwards & Richard Kemball Jr. They yielding and paying to the town severally for every fifty akers. 5s. for the first year & ten the second yere and 15s the third yere and 20s the fourth yere 30s the fifth yere & 40s the sixth yere & so to pay yerely viz. 40s per yere during the above term. Also all the abouve rent is to be paid yerely for the use of the ministry among us." He was also one of a committee to perfect the line between Bass river and Wenham, and 18, 5mo, 1673, was on a committee to establish rates for the cost of building the meeting house, which was voted to be "18 ft. square 18 ft. Stud, to be added to Roberts house."

Richard died in 1676, and a few items taken from his inventory are of interest. The amount of his estate was £986.16s.6d.

Item the dwelling house & 132 acres of land and 17 acres of medow belonging to it. £370. About 200 acres of land in Rowley Villiage.

Due from Daniel Gott for rent £3. per year during the natural life of Mary the wife of the late Richard Kimball of Wenham. Due from the contry for wages and other debts £2.16s.00.

Samuel Kemball and Thomas Kemball sons of the deceased have power of administration granted, and gave oath to the truth of the inventory 27, 9mo. (Nov.) 1676.

Due from his father's executors £35.10s.

Whereas Samuel and thomas kemball sons of Richard kemball of Wenham Late desesed have power of administration granted them by the court at Salem they together with Mary Kemball their mother-in-law having left it to this court to proportion the estat between them and to order what the widdow mary Kemball late wife of the said Richard Kemball desessed, shall have ordered as followeth, there being £800. estat the widdow shall have what she brought with her, which is the £19.16s and the £18.15s. mentioned in the Inventory and alsoe the three pounds per yere mentioned in the said inventory and also she shall be alowed three pounds per yer during her naturall life payed out of the estat aforesaid by the children of her said husband and also while she remaineth a widdoe and dwelt with them the said children are to keep ther mother a cow and four sheep and one swine winter and summer. she to solt her swin at her owne cost, with the roome in the house which she lives in, this to be in full satisfaction for her thirds out of the estat of her sayd husband, and the £800. abov said to be divided equally between the eight children of the deceased Richard Kemball, onely to John the eldest son a dubble portion; only the other six children are to alow out of ther part of the estat for all the troble in paying the debts & and the land to stand ( ) for the ¶formance of the same.

yn court held at ypswich the 26 of sept 1676.

Attest Robert Lord Cler.

From the circumstance that he had wages due from the country, as is stated in the inventory, it is probable that he had been engaged in the war with the Indians, and was probably with his nephew, Caleb Kimball, at the time the latter was killed at Bloody Brook.

4 John Kimball[2] (Richard[1]) was born in Rattlesden, county of Suffolk, England, in 1621, and came to America with his father. He settled in Ipswich, Mass., and died there May 6, 1698. In a deposition made in 1666 he says he is 35 years old. In a deposition made in 1684, when he was 53 years old, he and his nephew, Philip Fowler, testify "that Mary wife of Thomas patch, Abigail Bosworth, (probably wife of Haniniel Bosworth, who Richard, Sr., calls cousin in his will), and Elizabeth Spofford were daughters of Thomas Scott Sr." In 1656 he was appointed attorney for Thomas Scott of Stamford, Ct., son of Thomas Scott, Sr., late of Ipswich, and brother-in-law of his father, Richard Kimball, Sr. Thomas Scott's will was approved March 8, 1653–4, and mentions children Thomas, Elizabeth, Abigail, Hannah, Sarah, Mary, and brother Richard Kimball. Thomas Scott, Jr., was in the Indian War, under Capt. Lathrop, when he was killed at Squakeheage (Northfield, Mass.) Sept. 8, 1675.

By trade John Kimball[2] was a wheelwright, but by occupation he seems, like his brothers, to have been also an extensive farmer. He frequently bought and sold land, and there are a number of deeds on record at Salem bearing his name. October 16, 1665, he was appointed one of the executors of the will of Bridget Bradstreet. In her will she mentions her oldest daughter, Martha Kimball. (This is evidently a clerical error, as Martha was the wife of William Beal.) She gives to her "the gound she now hath now in her possession, and my greine hood, a peuter dish, and Mr. Morton's Bocke and on sheet and on peliber (Pillowbear) To my daughter Mary Kemball my ould bible, my cloth waskate, my stamell peticote, on boulster and on palow, on peuter dish and on candlestick."

John Kimball[2] married Mary Bradstreet about 1655. He came over in the same ship with her and her father and mother. She was born in England in 1633. Most historians say that John married for his second wife Mary Jordan. This is an error. (See John[3], Henry[2], Richard[1].) On March 8, 1673, he united with the church by taking the covenant. His will was made March 18, 1697–8. In it he mentions his sons Richard, John, and Mosis, to whom he gives sixe shillings a peece in money, which is all I intend to for them having by deed of gift giuene before what I them intended out of my estat. He mentions his sixe dafters Mary Sarah, hannah, Rebekah Elizabeth, and Abigail. His sunes Beniamin and Joseph kimbal have all the personal property divided between them, except one steer that he gives "to my sun beniamin, and my best cubbard I giue toe my sun beniamin's wife: in consideration of what they haue dune or may doe for me in my eage and weaknes." His real estate had all been given away before this time, and his personal property which was estimated at £131.9s.11d. consisted mainly of "Quick Stock" as follows Six Oxen £24. Eight cows £26. 13 young cattle £18.10s. 29 shepp £6. 12 swine £5.

5 Thomas Kimball[2] (Richard[1]) was born in Rattlesden, Suffolk county, England, in 1633, and was one year old when he came to New England with his parents. He later went to Ipswich, Mass., and was living in Hampton, N. H., Oct. 20, 1653, and was an owner of mill property there on Oyster river. He made his home at that place as late as 1660. He afterwards removed to that portion of Rowley which is included in the present town of Bradford, Mass. Previous to 1675 the section where Thomas and his brother Benjamin lived was within the limits of Rowley, but the locality was called Merrimack when Thomas was elected a constable on Feb. 20, 1668–9. His house was one of the legal places for posting and "publishing any orders or other business of public concernment to the whole town." His house was situated on the Boxford road, and its situation can still be located. At that place he lived and prospered for about ten years. He was a mechanic and a thrifty farmer, owning over four hundred acres of land and a large amount of personal property, as is shown by the inventory of his estate.

At that time the skulking Indians continually annoyed the white inhabitants. The Merrimac river was a pathway; the Indians could make rapid sallies upon the settlements and make their escape without penetrating the forests. Haverhill had been attacked with all the cruelty of the savages. On the night of May 2, 1676, three well known "converted" (half civilized) Indians, Peter, Andrew, and Symon, were intending to kill some parties in Rowley, but the night being far advanced, they wreaked their vengeance upon the Kimballs. Thomas Kimball was killed by Symon, and his wife and five children, namely, Joanna, Thomas, Joseph, Priscilla, and John were taken captive and carried forty miles into the wilderness, where they remained forty-one days, and were freed without ransom by the friendly offices of the chief Wanalancet, of the Pennacook Indians. Her own life and that of her infant were threatened, and twice were the fires lighted to burn them. They reached their home June 13, 1676.

Great was the anguish of their friends during their captivity, and on May 3, 1676, her pious parents in Ipswich asked prayers on the Sabbath that they might be delivered.

Subsequently she addressed a petition to the Governor and Council that she might be protected from Simon, the Indian, who had threatened to kill her and her children if she returned to her own house. The three Indians were seized and confined in jail, but escaped and pursued their course of blood most mercilessly thereafter, and their subsequent fate is unknown. They were semi-civilized and had worked for and lived a great deal with the white people. Thomas Kimball married Mary, daughter of Thomas and Joanna Smith of Ipswich, as is shown by the following note from the records at Salem: "Nov. 18, 1686 Richard and Benjamin Kimball of Bradford did covenant to and with the Selectmen of Ipswich that they would take Thomas Smith and his wife to Bradford to the house of Mary Kimball the widow of Thomas Kimball and provide their Meate, drink, washing, lodgeing, clothes and attendance with all things necessary for persons in such a condition for the space of one year begining at the date hereof, the price for a year to be £25." "Dec. 8, 1681 Agreed with Richard Kimball of Bradford to allow unto him further keeping and providing for his grandfather Thomas Smith for the year ensuing £13." According to this Joanna Smith had probably died during the year.

The name of Thomas Kimball[2] occurs very frequently on the early records of the town of Merrimack. Until the time of his death he always held some town office, being frequently selectman.

6 Benjamin Kimball[2] (Richard[1]), born in 1637, about the time that his father moved from Watertown to Ipswich, Mass. He died June 11, 1695. He was probably a resident of Exeter, N. H., in 1659, a carpenter by trade. Removed to Salisbury, Mass., and was on the trial jury in 1662. Was a resident of Rowley, Mass., May 12, 1663, when he bought land in Rowley of Elizabeth Starrett of Haverhill, Mass. At this time Rowley included within its limits the present Bradford, Georgetown, and Groveland. His land was in what is now known as Bradford. On Feb. 20, 1668, at the first town meeting in Merrimack, afterwards Bradford, he was chosen an overseer of the town. He was called of that town, March 16, 1670, and March 15, 1674. On Jan. 6, 1675, he and his wife Mercy of Bradford, Mass., sold forty acres of land to the inhabitants of that town for the use of the minister. On Nov. 23, 1667, he bought several tracts of land. Among them was land which once belonged to his brother, Thomas Kimball[2], who was killed by an Indian on May 3, 1676. He was cornet of horse troops and was known as "Cornet Kimball." He and his brother, Richard Kimball[2], were soldiers in 1683 and 1684, under Capt. Appleton. His house was in the west parish of old Bradford, not far from the ancient cemetery. He was a wheelwright and a farmer. He married in Salisbury, Mass., April, 1661, Mercy, daughter of Robert and Ann Hazeltine.* She was born 16, 8$^{mo}$, 1642, and died Jan. 5, 1707-8. She was one of the first members received into the first church in Bradford, when she, with sixteen other women, were admitted January 7, 1882–3. Her will, made May 14, 1706, was proven February 2, 1707–8. She gives the names of her children in the will. His inventory showed that he was well off for the times. The total amount of the estate was £1060.7s. Among the assets was a one-fourth interest in a saw-mill in Haverhill, Mass., near the Amesbury line, that he bought of Matthew Harriman. This interest was handed down

* Robert Hazeltine and his brother John were among the earliest settlers of that part of Rowley that is now known as Bradford, and Robert had afterwards permission to ferry passengers across the Merrimack river. The first marriage recorded on the Rowley books is "Robert Hazeltine and Ann his wife were married 10mo 23, 1639," but her family name is not given.

in the family for several generations. The gravestones of Benjamin and Mercy Kimball may still be seen in the cemetery at Bradford.

She was a sister of his brother Benjamin's wife. He resided in Ipswich and died in 1682. He was a prosperous farmer and owned at different times many tracts of land. On July 6, 1665, he bought his brother Richard's house in Ipswich, with adjacent lands, and lands in Salisbury and Bradford were owned by him. The inventory of his estate was taken Sept. 23, 1682, and shows that he owned at that time, eighteen head of cattle, twenty-three sheep, ten swine, and three horses. He was free from debt, and his widow was to have the use of the property until his children became of age. The children were all born in Ipswich.

THIRD GENERATION.

8 Richard Kimball[3] (Henry[2], Richard[1]) was born at Watertown, Mass., Oct. 13, 1643; died at Wenham, July 30, 1715. He went from Watertown, with his parents, to Ipswich, Mass., and from thence went to Wenham, where he afterwards lived. On May 13, 1667, he married Rebecca, daughter of John Abbye of Wenham, Mass., who died June, 1704. He married second, Nov. 20, 1706, the widow Ford of Ipswich, Mass. He was one of the administrators of his father's estate. In 1715 he testified that he remembered that Walter Fairfield, Sr., had a house within the bounds of Ipswich before 1661 in which Richard Coy lived as a tenant now in possession of sd. Fairfield.

CHILDREN.

i. Rebecca[4], b. Dec. 20, 1668; m. April 12, 1694, James Poland of Ipswich, Mass.
ii. Mary[4], b. June 26, 1674; d. Feb., 1704.
iii. Abigail[4], b. March 12, 1680.

9 John Kimball[3] (Henry[2], Richard[1]) was born at Watertown, Mass., Dec. 25, 1645. When about sixteen years of age he went to live with his grandfather, John Wiatt of Ipswich, where he remained until his grandfather died, in December, 1665, when the property was left to him by will upon his fulfilling certain conditions. This property was bounded on the "Meeting house Green." This shows where he lived in Ipswich. He sold this estate March 25, 1667, and removed to Newbury, Mass., where he was living on June 17, 1668. About 1669 he removed to Amesbury, Mass., where he afterwards lived. He testified in the trial of Susan Martin for witchcraft, on May 16, 1692, and then states that "twenty-three years ago when about to move from Newbury," etc. A full account of his testimony may be found in Increase Mather's account of the witch trials. He was a yeoman and wheelwright, took the oath of allegiance December 20, 1677, was made freeman in 1690, served as appraiser of different estates, and died previous to May 20, 1726. Administration was granted to his son John, June 6, 1726. He married, October, 1665, Mary, daughter of Francis and Jane Jordan. This is shown by the following receipt: "Know ye that John Kimball, Thomas ffowler, and James George all of Almsbury have rec'd our part of ye Estate of ffrancis Jordan according to ye last will of Jane Jordon of Ipswich 8 of December 1693." The original of this receipt is on file at Salem in the envelope that contains Jane Jordan's will.

In Jane Jordan's will she leaves one-sixth part of her estate to Mary Kimball. She then says: "My will is having paid John Kimball more than any of the rest out of the estate, that five pounds be accounted towards his sixth part and the rest I hereby give to pay for what Labour and pains he hath taken for me about my bussinese accounting that he hath rec'd ten pounds more than this which I account towards his sixth part."

He may have married Mary Pressy of Amesbury, Feb. 9, 1712–3, as a marriage is recorded at Newbury between John Kimball and Mary Pressy. If this was so, she soon died, and in April, 1715, he married the widow Deborah (Weed) Bartlett, who was born June 15, 1659, daughter of John Weed. She survived him.

CHILDREN.

i. Mary[4], b. July 19, 1667. Never married. She resided in Amesbury, Mass., at the time of her death. Dec. 8, 1726, she signed an agreement in relation to her father's estate.

v. Abraham[4], b. ——. By a writing from his mother and others he received a part of the homestead of his father, with the west end of the house, one half of the barn, two acres of land, with the fruit trees. He resided in Amesbury, Mass., and retained this property until Jan. 11, 1754, when he sold all the real estate he inherited from his father to John Kimball. He was then approaching old age. As there is no mention of wife or children it is evident that he had no family.

10 Henry[3] (Henry[2], Richard[1]) was born about 1655 (twenty-two in 1677). Resided in Wenham, Mass., until about 1675, when he removed to Haverhill, Mass., and was living there on Jan. 10 of that year. He was a soldier in King Philip's war, and served in 1675–6, probably with his brother Caleb. He married, Dec. 14, 1677, Hannah, daughter of Onesipherous Marsh of Haverhill, Mass. She and her only son John were killed by the Indians, March 15, 1696–7. Henry did not marry again, and so left no male descendant, but the descendants of his daughters are very numerous. Henry died in 1698.

She was born in 1686 and survived her husband sixty-five years, dying Oct. 16, 1786, aged 100, daughter of Isaac Burton. John was an inhabitant of Boxford as early as 1669. August 24, 1665, Richard Hubbard confirmed to Richard Kimball of Wenham his farm in Rowley village (now Boxford). John probably settled on this land. He was made freeman March 22, 1688–9. By the frequency with which the name of "Corporal" Kimball is found upon the early records of the town it is evident that he was a man of importance in town affairs. In 1675 he was tax collector. In 1711 his name and those of his sons are upon the tax list. He was a member of the church in Topsfield, and was dismissed to the church in Boxford in 1702. His will is on file at Salem, Mass., and bears date Feb. 19, 1718, and was probated April 15, 1721.

He married, 2d, Nov. 5, 1714, Mrs. Mehitable (Day) Kimball, widow of his cousin Richard, son of Benjamin Kimball. Many real estate transactions in which Richard Kimball had an interest are on record, and these in some cases have been valuable as a means of tracing his brothers and sisters. His will was probated Feb. 5, 1732–3. Part of it is of interest as showing what he cousidered a comfortable provision for his widow. "Wife Mehitable is to have the west end of dwelling house and the use of my cows which she shall choose and that they shall be kept for her summer and winter by my executors said executors shall also provide for her comfortable going to and from the House of God. 25 John[3] (Thomas[2], Richard[1]) was born in Rowley, Oct. 14, 1675. He left that town previous to 1702 and went to Piscataqua, in the province of East Jersey. So far we have been unable to find any further traces of him. The records of the courts in East Jersey are all at Trenton, and we have examined them without finding any trace of John. The only Kimballs so far found in New Jersey have either proved to be descendants of the other branches of the family or have turned out to be Kembles, there being two families at least of Kembles in the state.

26 Richard[3] (Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born Dec. 30, 1665; died Jan. 10, 1711; married Sept. 6, 1692, Mehitable Day, born Jan. 26, 1669, daughter of John and Sarah (Pengry) Day. After Richard Kimball died she married his cousin Richard, the son of Thomas, and survived him. She was the wife of two Richard Kimballs, and had a son and step-son Richard Kimball. Richard Kimball lived in Bradford and was prominent in town affairs, being town clerk for many years. In the division of his father's estate he received one-fourth part of his interest in the saw-mill in Haverhill, also land and meadows in that place and in Amesbury.

28 Jonathan Kimball[3] (Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) was born in Bradford, Mass., Nov. 26, 1673; died Sept. 30, 1747; married July 15, 1696, Lydia Day, born March 18, 1676, died Sept. 16, 1739, daughter of John and Sarah (Pengry) Day. He married second, Nov. 3, 1739, widow Jane Plummer, who died 1764. His last marriage, late in life and soon after the death of his first wife, evidently was not a happy one, as he says in his will: "Since my wife Jane has eloped and refuses to live with me, I give her five shillings and a pair of leather gloves." The widow was not satisfied with this, for afterwards she receipts for £50. Jonathan Kimball bought and sold many tracts of land. Some of the deeds concerning these transfers throw considerable light on the relations of various parties concerned. Jonathan of Bradford for love and good will gives all his lands in Chester to be equally divided among his four sons Benjamin, Jonathan, Nathaniel, and Isaac, Nov. 12, 1733.

He was a tailor, and bought land in Haverhill of Henry Hazeltine, Sept. 10, 1733. After this he removed to Methuen, Mass., and bought land of Richard Kelley, June 9, 1740. It is probable that this land was north of the line as laid out about this date, and was in what is now Salem, New Hampshire, as we find that he lived in that town at the time of his death, and his children all married and settled in Salem, N. H. In 1753 he bought land west of "Chysarges Hill so called" (Kearsarge) in Mason's grant. His widow married John Webster of Plaistow, N. H.

xi. Sarah[5], bap. March 11, 1749.
xii. Abraham[5], b. April 17, 1748; d. 1772, in consequence of falling from a barn that he was assisting to build. In his will it is recited, "By a fall from the frame of a barn on the ninth day of June instant he was brought to eminent danger," etc. He mentions his "Honorable Mother Elizabeth Kimball widow of my Honorable father Jeremiah Kimball, late of Hopkinton yeoman she being left poor and needy, so as to depend upon her children some of which live in Mass. Bay. and others are low in estate. So she depends on my brothers James and Reuben of Hopkinton and myself. I leave so much as my executors may think necessary during her natural life or widowhood not exceeding 40 shillings or less than 10 shillings lawful money." After the death of his mother the balance of his estate to go to his brothers James and Reuben. This will is a good illustration of the poverty of the country at this time, when a a sum of not over $8.00 is mentioned as an annuity for the support of an aged mother.

xiii. Phebe[5], b. July 3, 1751.
xiv. Richard[5], b. Jan. 1, 1753.

91 Aaron Kimball[4] (David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., June 7, 1710; died July 30, 1760, Hopkinton, N. H.; married Dec. 17, 1731, Susanna Smith. He was a tailor and resided, until five children were born, in Haverhill, Mass. Previous to 1742 he removed to Hopkinton, N. H., his son, Abraham, being the first white boy born in that town. In 1746 he built a fort in Hopkinton opposite the present house of Mr. James Story. He was a prominent and influential citizen of the town, and his name is frequently mentioned on the early records. An antique tablet marks his grave in the old cemetery on Putney's hill. His children are given from a few records that have been found and from his will which is on file at Exeter. His wife's will is on file at Nashua.

She was the daughter of Joseph Emerson and Martha (Toothaker) Emerson, and grand-daughter of Robert Emerson and Ann (Grant) Emerson. He lived in the northern part of Haverhill, Mass. When the line was run between the two provinces his property fell into New Hampshire, and was in the town now known as Hampstead. On some old records widow Mary Kimball is mentioned as being north of the line in 1742. Benjamin and Mary were members of the church in Plaistow or North Haverhill in Nov., 1730. He was the first deacon of the church in Plaistow, being elected Feb. 3, 1731. He owned land in Chester, N. H., which he left to his son Moses. It is said that he married at the age of eighteen and went north of the river, three miles into the woods, to clear his farm, and his mother was very much distressed at the great danger he ran from the Indians. The date of his death is erroneously given on the monument erected to his memory in Plaistow graveyard as 1752.

96 Philip Kimball[4] (Robert[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., Feb. 1, 1711–2; died 1800, Concord, N. H.; married Dorcas Foster. Philip Kimball's and Dorcas Foster's purposes of marriage were posted up at the meeting house in Rumford on the 31st day of July, 1735. He bought from Ebenezer, Joseph, and Solomon, his brothers, their share in original right of Robert Kimball in Rumford, June 14, 1745. This homestead Philip and Dorcas sold to Benjamin Rolfe, Jan. 28, 1768. He resided in Concord, N. H., on the place where Samuel Curtis lived in 1856. He was a famous hunter and versed in all the customs of the Indians. Parties when going for their cattle at night went armed in times of Indian hostilities. Mr. Kimball once saw a man following home the cows with his gun supported on his arms. He being behind a tree, when the man passed by, sprang out upon him, and clasped him securely by the waist. The man supposed an Indian had assailed him and struggled violently. At length Kimball released him, saying, "When you go for the cows, start them on their way home, but never follow them; take a circuit, and thus avoid the Indians, who are on the lookout when the cows are coming from pasture." He was a noted marksman, and Deer Rock in Concord is so called because he once shot a noble buck there. He was corporal on a scouting party under John Goff in 1746.

"July 22. 1747. The mark of Oliver Kimball's cattel and other cuachers is a swalous tail of ye right ear, and a halfany ye upr sid of ye left ear." In new countries all the cattle are turned to pasture in the woods in the spring, and herd together, therefore it is very important that each farmer should have some distinguishing mark on his cattle. These marks were registered on the town books, and were generally made by cutting pieces out of the ears, rarely by branding.

101 Ephraim Kimball[4] (Abraham[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born May 8, 1702, Bradford, Mass; died 1749; administration was granted on his estate Sept. 12, 1749; married Nov. 30, 1724, Esther Chadwick. They lived in Bradford, Mass.

CHILDREN.

i. Abraham[5], b. Aug. 6, 1725.

ii. Asa[5], b. Sept. 10, 1728. Settled in Middletown, Conn. He bought land in Salem, N. H., bordering on Isaac Kimball's meadow, Nov. 16, 1754. He was then a resident of Middletown, Hartford Co., Conn.

102 Samuel Kimball[4] (Samuel[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., Aug. 17, 1714; died in Plaistow, N. H., 1789; married Dec. 21, 1736, Hannah Abbott of Andover, Mass. He was a farmer and lived in that part of Haverhill which, after the line was run, became Plaistow, N. H. He seems to have lived on the border line between Plaistow and Atkinson, for in 1768, Feb. 17, he petitioned that his property, both real and personal, might be transferred from Atkinson to Plaistow, and this was done. Samuel Kimball of Plaistow was guardian of the children of Jonathan Dow of Plaistow, Feb. 27, 1768. In his father's will he is called of Haverhill, and received the portion of his father's estate situated in that town. He represented Atkinson and Plaistow in the Provincial Congress, at Exeter, Dec. 21, 1775, and was a member of the same body in 1776. Administration of his estate was granted to his son, Joseph, then of Plainfield, N. H., Aug. 28, 1789.

CHILDREN.

i. William[5], b. Feb. 8, 1737; m. Ruth ——; no children. He removed to Henniker, N. H., as did most of the family. He made his will March 7, 1806. He left a legacy to Nancy Mero to be paid to Joshua Darling and by him to be dealt out discretionary to said Nancy for her use and her family. He left his wife, Ruth, six hundred and sixty-six dollars and sixty-seven cents, provided she relinquished her legal right of dower in his estate. The residue of his estate he gave to John Kimball, of Henniker, his nephew, whom he appointed executor.

ii. John[5], b. Oct. 23, 1739.

iii. Hannah[5], b. May 8, 1743; m. (Ints.) Amesbury, Mass., Oct. 12, 1787, Orlando Davis of Plaistow, N. H. Joshua and William of Henniker, and Joseph of Plainfield set off lands belonging to their father's estate to Hannah, wife of Orlando Davis of Amesbury, Dec. 24, 1803. John and Mary, and Samuel of Henniker make a similar deed.

272 iv. Samuel[5], b. July 5, 1745; resided at Henniker, N. H.

273 v. Joshua[5], b. Aug. 2, 1747; resided at Henniker, N. H.

vi. Joseph[5], b. Sept. 10, 1749; resided at Henniker and Plainfield, N. H. Joseph seems to have had some trouble with the people of Henniker during the War of the Revolution, as appears from documents published in the historical collections of the state of New Hampshire: "Committee of Safety at Heniker, The resolves of the committee. met to discourse Joseph Kimball Esq. concerning his political principals in the dispute betwixt Britain and this North America. Accusations are brought as follows: The sd Kimball did say that he did not blame General Gage for coming into this North America. But he did not Justify or approve of his evil conduct since he had been in ye country. Further the said Kimball is for keeping up Civil Authority. Further ye sd Kimball being accused of speaking favourably of Gov. Wentworth. But discoursing the Committee before the body of the people and finding the people disaffected, the sd Kimball saith he is sorry if he hath given any provocation of offence. But means to do all so far as lies in his power to Propagate ye liberty cause, and we the sd Committee of Safety so receive ye said Kimball as a friend to the common cause June 12. 1775. Jonas Brown &c." This, however, did not end the trouble, for March 14, 1776, William and Joseph of Henniker are both suspected of being enemies of American liberty. Joseph Kimball was selectman of Henniker in 1775.

274 vii. Asa[5], b. Aug. 5, 1751; resided in Plaistow and Henniker.

103 James Kimball[4] (Samuel[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., Jan. 29, 1723–4; died Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 19, 1781; married Oct. 13, 1748, Lydia Dustin of Haverhill. After marriage he spent the remainder of his life in the west parish of Haverhill. Several of his children were baptized at the west parish church.

He resided in Bradford, Mass., and Pembroke, N. H. March 13, 1754, he sold to his brother, Edmund, all the property he received by will of his father. He then calls himself of Bradford. He made his will Feb. 21, 1789. He left the use of his property to his wife during her widowhood. At his wife's death all his property was to go to Edmund, son of his brother, Edmund Kimball of Bradford, Mass.

Joshua Kimball of Pembroke was a delegate to the constitutional convention, 1788. Joshua Kimball of the first Co. of Militia in Pembroke, Petitions Dec. 30, 1777, that he may be annexed to Col. Stickney's Regiment.

106 Edmund Kimball[4] (Samuel[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born April 6, 1716, Bradford, Mass.; died Nov. 10, 1795; married Jan. 25, 1742, Dorothy, daughter of Ephraim and Ann (Tenney) Kimball. She was born June 30, 1724, died April 30, 1797. He was a farmer, and resided in Bradford. He was a man of great influence, and had a large landed estate after he had given each of his sons a handsome inheritance. He lived in the center of the village and was succeeded there by his son, William.

198 Daniel Kimball[5] (Daniel[4], Joseph[3], John[2], Richard[1]) born in Ipswich, Mass., Oct. 20, 1755; died May 24, 1843, his death being hastened by his being thrown from his carriage; married June 15, 1783, Elizabeth Osgood, daughter of John and Mary (Phelps) Osgood of North Andover, Mass., born March 1, 1757, died Dec. 3, 1789; married 2d, June 21, 1791, Abiah Holt, daughter of Joshua and Phebe (Farnum) Holt of Andover, Mass., born April 16, 1761, died May 4, 1841. He and his wife united with the South church in Andover, Mass., Oct. 26, 1783, and were dismissed to the church in Hancock, N. H., March 16, 1789, and he was made deacon of that church Oct. 20, 1791.

He enlisted on the Lexington alarm, April 19, 1775, in Capt. Jacob Gould's Co. He at one time worked in the powder mill owned by Samuel Phillips, which in 1776 made powder for the army. He went to Cambridge, Mass., and staid in the army a few weeks in the latter part of 1775. He enlisted Jan. 1, 1776, in Capt. Mighill's Co., Loami Baldwin's Regiment, and was stationed at Cambridge, Mass., until the British left Boston, when he marched to New London, Conn., and from thence went to New York by water. He remained there until the army left the city. Then he went to White Plains, but was not in the battle. Afterwards he went to Morristown, N. J., where he was sick until the expiration of his service. He enlisted for eight months, April, 1777, and on May 1 went to Cambridge, Mass., where he was sick with the small pox. After his recovery he joined the army at Stillwater, and was in the last part of the last battle at that place. He was in Col. Nichol's Regiment, he thinks, in Capt. Whipple's Co.; was at Stillwater till after Burgoyne's surrender, then went to Albany, and was stationed there till expiration of term of service, in December, 1777. He was a pensioner, and the above is from the pension rolls, Washington, D. C.

The war left him, as many others, poor, and so he took up new lands in Greenfield, N. H., and while clearing his land slept in a hollow log and stopped up the entrance with a stump to keep out the wild animals. Later he went to Hancock, N. H., where he spent the remainder of his life. In order to earn money with which to pay for his farm, he shaved shingles, often by the light of pine knots prolonging his work late into the night, his wife occupying herself by carding wool to keep her family in clothes. Letters written by him when past eighty years of age show his intelligence and good penmanship. He enjoyed good health and was an active man. He was a member of the board of selectmen of Hancock, N. H. He is remembered as a good reader and speaker, and frequently read sermons in the church when there was no minister.

v. Priscilla Livermore[6], m. Joseph Day of Bradford, Mass. No children.

vi. Daniel Livermore[6], was brought up at the house of his uncle, Dea. John Kimball, at Concord, N. H. He was a major in the Revolution. He married Sarah Walker, granddaughter of the first minister of Concord, and died in Concord in 1796.

227 Obadiah Kimball[5] (Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., May 28, 1728; died Oct. 22, 1804; married Nov. 6, 1750, Abigail Carlton, born ——, died Dec. 8, 1804. He died without children. His will, proven Nov. 7, 1804, is interesting, as it gives the names of a number of his relatives, as follows: Wife Abigail, brother John, nephews Benjamin, Joab, and Richard Hazen, sons of his brother, Richard Kimball, deceased. Neice Priscilla wife of John Day, Lydia wife of Nathaniel Kimball. Jesse son of James Kimball. Nephew James Exr. He brought up his nephew James, who was afterwards Col. James Kimball of Bradford.

228 Sarah Kimball[5] (Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., July 15, 1731; married Nov. 14, 1748, Deacon Thomas Webster of Bradford, Mass. He was a descendant of John and Mary (Shatswell) Webster of Ipswich, Mass.

(For this family see "Descendants of John Webster," by S. P. Sharples.)

229 Richard Kimball[5] (Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., Oct. 13, 1732; died 1780. He died very suddenly. Having conversed with his family in the evening, he read the last two chapters of Ephesians, then prayed, and retired to his bed and died immediately. He married, July 22, 1755, Sarah Harriman of Plaistow, N. H., born 1731, died Nov. 16, 1797. She was a descendant of Bernard Harriman, from Rowley, county of York, England, who came to Rowley, Mass., in 1640. She was the daughter of Abner Harriman. Richard was a farmer and lived on Jew street, in Haverhill, Mass. Mrs. Sarah Kimball married for her second husband an Eaton, and settled in Peacham, Vt.

H., Dec. 31, 1817; married Nov. 23, 1765, Anna Ayer, daughter of Samuel and Ann (Hazen) Ayer, born Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 3, 1740, died March, 1819. He lived on the homestead in Bradford, Mass., until his marriage. He then went with his young wife to found a home in Concord, N. H., as great an undertaking in those days as a trip to Kansas now. He lived in Concord on the place now occupied by Samuel S. Kimball. He was a man of strong religious convictions, and he united with the church in Bradford at the age of eighteen, and during his long life honored his Christian profession. During thirty years he was absent but once from public worship. He was very hospitable, and clergymen were always his welcome guests. Among them were his most valued friends. For twenty-nine years he was an officer of the church. He was noted for the fidelity and promptness with which he performed his public and private duties. The Sabbath was a day of sacred rest to him. Mrs. Kimball was a true and loving companion during their fifty years of wedded life. In 1769 she united with the church in Concord, and remembered the church by a bequest in her will.

CHILDREN, BORN IN CONCORD, N. H.

vii. Sarah[6], b. Sept. 22, 1779; d. Concord, N. H., July 2, 1869. She was a most estimable and lovely woman, and to her thoughtful care and regard for her kindred we are indebted for many of the facts relating to them. She was never married.

534 viii. Samuel Ayer[6], b. March 3, 1782; d. Oct. 16, 1858.

232 Eliphalet Kimball[5] (Job[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., Feb. 10, 1730–1; married May 10, 1759, Elizabeth Woodward. When a child he went with his father to Plainfield, Conn., and was residing there in 1764, when he sold land to Eben Williams.

CHILDREN.

i. Tamerson[6], b. March 8, 1760.

ii. John Lovel[6], b. Jan. 21, 1762; m. March 19, 1788, Tamesin Freeman. He lived most of his life in Cornish, N. H. He seems to have dropped the name John very early, and is always mentioned as Lovel Kimball. A number of transactions in land are found on the books, in which his name is mentioned. Lovel Kimball paid Oliver Torrey, Oct. 4, 1797, $5, for the privilege of carrying water in a subterranean pipe from the dwelling house of Torrey to the barn of Kimball forever. We have not been able to find record of any children.

535 iii. Eliphalet[6]. Lived at Cornish Flat, N. H.

233 Jacob Kimball[5] (Stephen[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., March 12, 1741; died Sept. 4, 1797; married March 25, 1766, Sarah Carleton, born 1739, died July 1, 1808. He bought wood land of Peter Coburn of Dracut, June 22, 1794.

234 Stephen Kimball[5] (Stephen[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., Oct. 30, 1746; died at Hanover, N. H., March 4, 1807; married Betty Wilson of Exeter, who died Dec. 5, 1815. He resided in Bradford, Mass., and Concord and Hanover, N. H., where he located in 1786. He was a farmer and a prominent citizen. He was a member of the Congregational church at Dartmouth College, and served as a deacon. He assisted at the organization of the church in 1805.

CHILDREN, BORN IN CONCORD, N. H.

i. Betsey[6], b. Oct. 20, 1774; d. Aug., 1824. She never married.

537 ii. Stephen[6], b. March 9, 1776; d. Sept. 4, 1808.

iii. Increase[6], b. Oct. 26, 1777; d. Sept. 15, 1856. He resided in Hanover, N. H.; was a tinsmith. He got out a patent for cutting nails about 1804; was offered a large sum for it, which he declined. Improvements by others soon made his patent valueless. This disappointment and religious controversies unsettled his mind, and he spent the remainder of his life about Hanover in comparative poverty. He was very religious and lived without restraint. Under a vow, he did not shave, and his beard was large and white. He had a son who was killed at Hanover, July 4, 1851, by the premature discharge of a cannon.

iv. Moses[6], b. Jan. 28, 1779.

v. Mehitable[6], b. Jan. 25, 1782; m. 1811, Rev. Edward Lutwyche Parker, b. Litchfield, N. H., July 28, 1785, and d. in Derry, N. Resided in Salem, N. H. Lieut. Richard Kimball was constable and tax-collector in 1795, and received six pence in the pound for collecting. Col. Richard Kimball kept tavern from 1797 to 1800. On his tombstone in the old graveyard at Salem, N. H., are these lines.

Friends nor Physicians could not save,
My mortal body from the grave:
Nor can the grave confine me here,
When Christ commands me to appear.

295 a. David Kimball[6] (Benjamin[5], John[4], John[3], Henry[2], Richard[1]) born in Poplin, N. H., Dec. 5, 1730; will probated Oct. 27, 1801; married Oct. 28, 1751, Annie Sargent; married 2d, Abigail ——. In his will, which was made in Waterboro, Me., he leaves each of his children one dollar, except Aaron, who was the youngest son; he was to receive the residue of the estate after the death of Abigail, wife of David. In 1755 he, with his wife, Ann, and two children, were warned out of Amesbury. In old times selectmen looked with suspicion upon all persons coming into the town to live, for fear that they might become town charges. He seems after that to have gone to Brentwood, as his son David was born in Brentwood. In 1764, he, with his brothers, was in the westerly end of Brentwood.

From a notice of his death we extract the following: "Without doubt he resided longer in the township, and was better acquainted and identified with its history than any other citizen. His memory was a store-house of information in regard to incidents connected with the evolution of the town from a primeval forest to the present time. When a young man he made choice of the carpenter trade as a pursuit. He built the first framed school-house in the town, which was located within the present village limits. Many of the framed houses in the town were built by him, and their enduring quality attests substantial and thorough workmanship. In 1851 he was employed by the Cleveland, Painsville and Ashtabula Railway Company to superintend the construction of all its depots, freight houses, etc., on its line between Cleveland and Erie. He continued in the employ of the company until 1858, when he retired from the active pursuits of his calling. He was long connected with the Congregational church in Madison, and was one of its active members. He was largely instrumental in the construction of the church building, and when it was repaired, shortly before his death, he presented the pews to the society. He was not a man who cared or sought for positions of public trust, but had held one or two town offices, and at the time of his death he was a director in the Exchange bank."

He early removed to Francestown, N. H., and later went to Weathersfield, Vt., where he resided the remainder of his life. His home was a hillside farm, in a humble abode, amid the shadowing mountains. The surroundings were wild and rough, but it afforded ample means, and was a fitting place to rear and educate his children in the virtues and industries of a pioneer life. That secluded and now forsaken old homestead is rich in its priceless associations, which will cling to it in the memories of his descendants. Two generations of his race were there reared to maturity. Now it is in the hands of strangers.

He removed to the farm of his father-in-law, Isaac Burrill, on Five Mile river, in Quaddick valley, East Thompson, Conn., before June, 1775, on which date he sold his property in Dudley, Mass. He was a private soldier in the Second Regt., Conn. Line, enlisting in Capt. William Manning's Co., at Woodstock, June 6, 1777. This regiment served during the summer and fall of 1777 along the Hudson, under General Putnam. They were ordered, Nov. 14, 1777, to join General Washington's army in Pennsylvania, and on Dec. 8 engaged in the sharp action at Whitemarsh, Penn., where the regiment lost a number of officers and men, killed and wounded. They wintered at Valley Forge, Penn. He was honorably discharged, Jan. 9, 1778. He enlisted as a private in the Fourth Connecticut, Col. John Durkee of Norwich, commanding, July 1, 1780. This regiment was serving with the main Army of the Hudson at the time Benedict Arnold deserted to the enemy. He was honorably discharged Dec. 10, 1780.

355 Ruel Kimball[6] (Boyce[5], Ebenezer[4], Samuel[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born December 20, 1778; died Easthampton, Mass., Oct. 1, 1847; married Jan. 1, 1799, Hannah Mather, born July 1, 1781, daughter of Timothy M., and Hannah (Church) Mather of Marlboro, Vt. She was descended from Richard Mather, the early minister of Dorchester, Mass., whose son, Increase Mather, was president of Harvard college, and whose grandson, Cotton Mather, was a celebrated minister. She was a woman of more than ordinary ability and well fitted for her position. Morally and intellectually her standard was high, and she so taught her children. He had but a common school education, and prepared himself for the ministry at a time when its duties were more than ordinarily laborious and self-denying, and when the burdens rested heavily on the wives. He at first located in Marlboro, Vt., in charge of the Presbyterian church; he left there about 1805, when he removed to Leroy, N. Y., where he remained till about 1816, when he went to Leyden, N. Y. He remained at this place until his death. He died while on a visit to his son, David M. Kimball, of Massachusetts. Though strict in his religious views and habits, he was still paternal and kind. His heart was always open to the unfortunate, and his benevolence was constant and in amount up to the scriptural standard. He was dignified, earnest, and thoughtful.

H., Feb. 12, 1860; married 1795, Mary Marsh, born 1773, daughter of Joel Marsh. They resided at Windham, N. H., and at other places, living for many years at West Lebanon, N. H. The Historical Magazine, vol. iv, p. 127, says: "Few men have passed a longer and more practically useful life than Capt. Richard Kimball, who died Feb. 12, 1860, at Mount Lebanon, N. H., in the ninety-second year of his age. Capt. Kimball is well known in this city (New York), where several of his sons reside. He was identified with all the early internal improvements in New England. When DeWitt Clinton commenced the construction of the Erie and Champlain canals, he was seeking for men having practical knowledge on the subject. He was referred by some gentlemen in Massachusetts to the deceased as the man who had been principally engaged in constructing the Middlesex canal, the first canal made in this country. Mr. Clinton at once paid a visit to Mr. Kimball, and after spending a week at his hospitable residence in New Hampshire, induced him to come to this state and undertake the superintendence and construction of the most difficult works which presented themselves at the commencement of the Erie and Champlain canals. For many years Gov. Clinton was accustomed to consult Capt. Kimball in all matters of practical difficulty in relation to the canals, and as an evidence of Mr. Clinton's confidence in his judgment, we have heard from one who was present, that on one occasion, at a meeting of the canal commissioners, it was insisted by some one that it was impossible to construct the Champlain canal through Ding Swamp, in Washington county. Gov. Clinton said, It can be done; I have consulted Mr. Kimball and he says it is practicable. Mr. Kimball undertook the work himself and it was finished satisfactorily. Capt. Kimball was distinguished for his hospitality and for the interest he took in educational and benevolent enterprises. His fondness for home and agricultural pursuits are attested by his residence of more than fifty years upon his farm on the Connecticut river, which in point of culture and beauty is unsurpassed in that beautiful valley. He leaves a widow eighty-seven years old, with whom he passed sixty-five years of happy wedded life."

He early in life went to Bradford, Mass., and was adopted by his uncle, Obadiah, who was childless. He spent the remainder of his life in Bradford. He took an active part in public affairs, was commissioned ensign Aug. 27, 1789, promoted captain, April 10, 1796, major, April 29, 1802, lieutenant-colonel, June 23, 1806, and was discharged Jan. 6, 1810. He helped to found the Bradford Academy and was one of its trustees, and as there was then no boarding house, he entertained many of the students. He was a man of good character and more than ordinary ability, was active and successful in business, very affectionate, a kind neighbor, public spirited. He had a high spirit and passionate nature. He was a good hater when occasion demanded. He was large, of commanding presence, regular featured, and of sanguine temperament. His death was caused by paralysis. One beautiful morning in June, as the end drew near, many were gathered about him in the large west room of the Deacon Jesse Kimball house, in Bradford, Mass., while for him the voice of his saintly son, Deacon Jesse, uttered petitions to the All Father. His countenance suddenly changed, and he was gone. There was a great funeral the following Sabbath. The coffin was placed in the great front yard. Trustees, students, neighbors, and numberless relatives were there. The latter returned to the house for supper, and were so numerous that they could not be seated.

527 Joab Kimball[6] (Richard[5],Benjamin[4],Richard[3],Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Haverhill, Mass., April 15, 1762; died Peacham, Vt., Nov. 13, 1843; married Jan. 24, 1799, Elizabeth Reed, born in Uxbridge, Mass., Jan. 24, 1773, died Windham, N. H., July 9, 1862, daughter of Thomas and Martha (Park) Reed* of Uxbridge, Mass. Her father's family was intellectual and refined and its members were all well educated. She inherited the elevated instincts of her race. She was very ambitious that her children should have a good education and a fair start in the race of life, and she labored to so place them that they would receive academical training. After the death of her husband she moved to Windham, N. H., where she lived with her daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Reed (Kimball) Morrison, and the remainder of her life passed in quietness and peace. Joab Kimball was raised upon a farm in the west parish of Haverhill, Mass. When he was a boy of twelve years old the country became engaged in the War of the Revolution, and he very early

*John Reed, the emigrant ancestor, left England in 1630, and settled in Rehoboth, Mass. He was a farmer. His son, Samuel[2], lived in Mendon, Mass., and his son, Samuel[3], was a resident of Mendon (now Uxbridge). Daniel[4] lived in Uxbridge, Mass. Thomas[5], his son, was of Uxbridge and married Sarah Taft of that town. Their son, Thomas[6], married Martha Park, an intellectual and refined lady. They were the parents of Elizabeth Reed. Martha Park's ancestor was Edward Park[1], a merchant of London, Eng. His son, Henry[2], was also a merchant in London. Richard[3] resided in Mendon, Mass., where his son, Thomas[4], also lived. Edward[5] lived in Mendon, and Nathan[6], the father of Elizabeth[7], lived in Uxbridge.

entered the army, where he spent three years. He enlisted April 10, 1781, at Haverhill, marched to Boston, thence to West Point, N. Y. In April, 1781, he was in Capt. Sylvanus Smith's Co., Col. Rufus Putnam's Regt. This was the Fifth Mass. Regiment, and belonged to the brigade under the command of Gen. Patterson. He served in this regiment until Feb., 1783, when he was transferred to the First Mass. Regt., and served in Capt. Goodell's Co. until Dec., 1783, when he was discharged at West Point, N. Y., by order of Gen. Henry Knox. The order for the discharge is now in the possession of Leonard A. Morrison, his grandson. It bears the autograph signature of Gen. Knox. He underwent great privations while in the service, and was disabled by them for life, his health being permanently injured. He, with the other soldiers in his company, had fatiguing marches and was often destitute of food. In the winter they had frequently to sleep on beds made of the boughs of pine and hemlock. He was a very handsome man, short, fleshy, and of a light, florid complexion. His wife was of medium height, with hazel eyes, dark brown hair, and light complexion. He lost much of his property in early life by endorsing notes for friends, which they allowed him to pay. From these reverses he never fully recovered. He and his wife resided for many years in Ryegate, Barnet, and Peacham, Vt. They were members of the church and their lives corresponded with their high professions.

It was discovered too late to insert in the proper place that James Kimball (244) went to Enfield, N. H., with his family, and there joined the Shakers. Becoming dissatisfied with them he left their society and went to Sheldon, Vt., in 1796, taking his family with him. In addition to the children given on page 166, he had a son born in 1770, or '71, named Solomon F., and also a son Jesse. The descendants of James are given below where they properly belong. We are indebted to B. F. Cummings of Salt Lake City, Utah, for this information.

566a. John Kimball[6] (James[5], Jeremiah[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) went to Sheldon, Vt., and bought real estate there. In 1821 John Kimball of Swanton, Vt., sold land in Sheldon.

566b. Solomon Farnham Kimball[6] (James[5],Jeremiah[4],David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hopkinton, N. H., 1770; died Mendon, Monroe Co., N. Y., July 9, 1825; married Anna Spaulding, died Feb. 25, 1825, daughter of Daniel and Speedy Spaulding. His children were probably all born in Sheldon, Vt. He removed from there to Bloomfield, near Mendon, in 1811, but soon went to Mendon, where he lived until his death.

CHILDREN.

i. Charles Spaulding[7], b. about 1795.
ii. Eliza[7], b. about 1797.
iii. Abigail[7], b. about 1799.

v. Melvina[7], b. 1803.
vi. Solomon F.[7], b. Feb. 7, 1805.
vii. Daniel[7], b. about 1807.

566c. James Kimball[6] (James[5], Jeremiah[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hopkinton, N. H., July 25, 1774; married Lucy ——. He settled with his parents and brothers in Sheldon, Vt., where he lived till about 1846. He then removed with his wife to Dunham, Canada, about fifteen miles north of Sheldon. Here he and his wife died, she of cholera.

vi. Maynard[7], b. about 1830; d. 1850, Enosburg Falls, Vt.
All of the above children, except Maynard, became ministers.

566d. Moses Kimball[6] (James[5],Jeremiah[4],David[3],Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hopkinton, N. H. Settled in Sheldon, Vt., with his parents. He resided there until his death, which occurred about 1846. He was a party to numerous land transactions in Sheldon, and owned the farm on which is situated the famous Mississquoi spring. No clue to a wife or children is given on the records, but from local tradition it is probable he had a son, Moses Kimball[7], and a daughter who married Eleazer Draper.

566e. Stephen Kimball[6](James[5],Jeremiah[4],David[3],Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) also lived in Sheldon until about 1810, when his name disappears from the records. Mrs. Stephen Kimball was a member of the first Methodist class organized in Sheldon in 1813.

566f. Jesse Kimball[6] (James[5], Jeremiah[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]). He was a party to a number of land transactions in which his brothers and father were interested. The last is dated 1811. There is no record of any wife or children.

567 Daniel Kimball[6] (Reuben[5], Jeremiah[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born June, 1763; died July 29, 1843; married Polly Stevens, born 1768, died Nov. 7, 1838, daughter of Archelaus Stevens of Enfield, N. H. He is said to have been the first white child born in Warner, N. H. At the age of eighteen he left his home for a section where land was cheap, and selected a lot on Sawyer's hill in Canaan, N. H., two miles northwest of Canaan St. His house was of logs, and afterwards he built a frame house. There he lived, and his descendants still live there after more than a hundred years have passed. He was a soldier of the Revolution, and enlisted in 1782 for three years, in Capt. David Livermore's Co., Col. Henry Dearborn's Regiment. He was a farmer. He is buried in the old cemetery on Sawyer's hill, and a marble slab marks his grave.

NANCY (CURRIER) KIMBALL.
Born 1787. Died 1888.

587 Phineas Jewett Kimball[6] (Samuel[5], Aaron[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hopkinton, N. H., Feb. 8, 1777; died Elgin, Ill., Nov. 7, 1861; married Relief Case, born 1787, died Nov. 24, 1848; married 2d, Rhoda Brooks. In June, 1834, he lived in Onondaga, N. Y. About this time he went to Elgin, Ill. His wife and daughter were the second and third white women to settle in the town. He owned the northeast corner of the town site.

CHILDREN.

i. Moses[7]. Probably died in Onondaga, N. Y., about 1834.

iii. Mary Ann[7], b. March 11, 1811; d. May 16, 1837. She was educated as a teacher, and was the first white person to die in the new settlement at Elgin, Ill.

588 Joseph Kimball[6] (Samuel[5], Aaron[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hopkinton, N. H., Sept. 1, 1783; died Perry, Ohio, July 25, 1835; married Nov. 28, 1804, Nancy Currier, daughter of William and Mary (Carter) Currier, born Concord, N. H., Sept. 26, 1787, died Elgin, Ill., Sept. 22, 1888, the year following the celebration of her centennial. Joseph Kimball lived in Groton and Plymouth, N. H., until the summer of 1834. He then made a trip to Illinois, spending two months in the state. In February, 1835, he again started west by way of Washington, D. C., arriving in Elgin in April. His son, Samuel J. Kimball, was staying in Elgin at this time. He left Elgin in July, going east to bring his family. He went first to Chicago, and then by water to Cleveland and by canal to Perry, Ohio. He died at this place, after an illness of five days. His widow came with his children to Elgin soon after, and lived there until the time of her death. The location which he took up was on the west bank of the Fox river, and he speaks of it as being beautifully situated and "so even that you can drive a team about over it equal to any old cultivated farm in an old country." His choice of a location has been abundantly justified by events that have since taken place, and his wife lived to see the prairie farm grow into a thriving city and become the center of the dairy business of the region. It is rather a curious fact that Mr. Gifford, who he says in his letter is to build a flour mill, was from Utica, the center of the butter and cheese industry of New York. He says in this letter that "We think that Chicago will be one of the most important places in all the western country." He says that he is going to build a saw and shingle mill at Elgin. He and Mr. Gifford are to build the dam together.

From an account of the celebration of Mrs. Kimball's hundredth birthday we make the following extracts. Mr. and Mrs. Kimball were greatly respected people in their New Hampshire home. Mr. Kimball was honored with several offices of trust. He was a captain of cavalry in the Thirty-Fourth Regiment of New Hampshire militia. His commission was dated May 24, 1816, and he served for three years. He was a justice of the peace for Grafton county. Mrs. Kimball retained her faculties to a remarkable degree to beyond her hundredth year. Towards her end she gradually failed and her mind kept returning to her younger days in New Hampshire. She said she must go home to attend to her various duties about the farm. She passed away peacefully, surrounded by her family, and went to that home where all the associates of her youth and most of her children had preceded her.

The seven older children were born in Groton, N. H. Two were born in Plymouth, N. H.

600 Mary Kimball[6] (Benjamin[5], Benjamin[4], Jonathan[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hampstead, N. H., March 12, 1746; died Dec. 25, 1799; married Dec. 27, 1764, Obededom Hall. They went in 1776 to Candia, and were the first settlers in the northeasterly part of the town. On one occasion, when Mr. Hall was confined to the house by sickness, Mrs. Hall threshed sufficient of the newly harvested rye for a grist, caught the horse in the woods, put a saddle, the rye, and herself on the horse, and then, with a child in her arms, she rode to Trickling Falls, a distance of some twenty miles, to mill. Mr. Hall was a soldier of the Revolution, serving in Rhode Island in 1778. He is buried in the old part of the cemetery back of the church on the hill in Candia.

601 Caleb Kimball[6] (Benjamin[5], Benjamin[4], Jonathan[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hampstead, N. H., Sept. 24, 1748; died Sutton, N. H., Dec. 19, 1825; married Feb. 8, 1769, Sarah Sawyer, born 1745, died Sutton, N. H., Feb. 22, 1822, daughter of Edmund and Sarah (Rowell) Sawyer. Caleb Kimball was one of the earliest selectmen of Sutton, N. H., and one of the largest taxpayers. He was one of a committee in 1784 to erect a meeting house, and served the town on various other occasions. He was associated with those who built the first saw-mill at the foot of Jones's hill, on Lane's brook. Tradition says he spent a year in town, preparing his farm, camping in the forest, before bringing in his family. He lived two years after marriage in Hampstead, and then removed to Goffstown, remaining there eleven years, and then removing with his family to Sutton. His wife was a woman of strong intellect and high purpose, and heartily seconded her husband in his endeavors for advancement. No efforts were spared for their children. For a very full account of the descendants of Caleb Kimball, in the female lines, see the history of Sutton, N. H.

609 David Tenney Kimball[6] (Daniel[5], Nathaniel[4], Jonathan[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., Nov. 23, 1782; died Ipswich, Mass., Nov. 2, 1860; married Oct. 20, 1807, Dolly Varnum Coburn, born Oct. 1, 1783, died Dec. 12, 1873, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Poor) Coburn of Dracut, Mass., and grand-daughter of Dea. Daniel and Hannah (Frye) Poor of Andover, Mass. In May, 1798, he entered Atkinson Academy, which he left Aug. 14, 1799, and entered Harvard College. He ranked high as a scholar, was graduated in 1803, and delivered the valedictory oration in Latin. He received the degree of A. M. in 1806. He taught one year in Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. He pursued the study of theology at Andover, under Rev. Jonathan French, who had several students in theology. This was the beginning of the theological seminary. He was approved by the association Aug. 6, 1805. Sept. 22, 1805, he first preached in Ipswich, Mass., and received a unanimous call on June 17, 1806. On Oct. 8, 1806, he was ordained over the first church in Ipswich, the eleventh pastor in succession. In his profession he devoted his affections, his time, and his talents to the service of the Master. He averaged five hundred visits yearly among his people, and often spent whole nights in affectionate ministrations to the sick and dying. In his prime he was six feet in height, weighed one hundred and seventy-five pounds, his eyes and hair were black, his step firm and elastic, his voice was pleasing, his enunciation distinct, and his manner calm and impressive. More than sixty pulpits were open to his ministrations by exchange. He took great interest in education and the public schools of every grade, in the cause of foreign missions he was an earnest laborer, in the anti-slavery agitation, a strong aider and defender. He was one of the original members of the first temperance society in the country. This society was instituted in 1813 and united heart and soul with all subsequent temperance movements. In the American Educational Society, which aimed to educate young men for the Christian ministry, he was greatly interested, and was for a time its secretary. To educate and equip with armor of heavenly temper, heralds of salvation to souls perishing for the bread of life, was in his estimation an object in which angels might well engage, and which Heaven stoops down to bless. During his ministry his church was blessed with several precious revivals of religion. In his home was dispensed a generous hospitality. His ministry to his people for nearly half a century was ever faithful. As a writer in the English language he was clear and forcible. He was an accurate scholar and instructive preacher. He was warm and tender in his domestic affections. In piety, sincere. When he drew near the river's brink, and some thought he had passed over, he revived and exclaimed, "The gates of the New Jerusalem are opening; I see within the city." At the moment of the soul's departure from the body there came to his lips a smile of ineffable sweetness, and there it remained till he was laid away near the center of the ancient cemetery in Ipswich. Among his published writings were the following: A sermon preached at the installation of the Reverend William Richie, in 1821, on "The Perfect Pattern for Christian Teachers." A sermon on the text "O, How I Love Thy Law." In 1823, a sketch of the Ecclesiastical History of Ipswich. And numerous other sermons. Mrs. Kimball survived her husband thirteen years and died in Ipswich in her ninety-first year. She was a devoted wife and mother, active and prominent in all societies and good works connected with the church and parish, and lived a beautiful Christian life.

640 Hezekiah Kimball[6] (Joshua[5], James[4], Samuel[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in the west parish of Haverhill, Mass.; baptized Aug. 21, 1791; died Portsmouth, N. H., July 15, 1830; married March 2, 1814, at Greenland, N. H., Hannah Philbrick, born ——, died 1831. He enlisted April 22, 1812, at which time he was about twenty years old, six feet and half an inch in height, for five years, in the company commanded by Capt. J. B. Walbach, that was attached to the First Regiment of Artillery, and was stationed at Fort Constitution in Portsmouth, N. H. While serving as sergeant in the above named company, a very severe storm, which occurred on the 27th of May, 1813, caused a barge to part from its moorings. Under the influence of the wind and tide it was stranded on the beach in the town of New Castle, near the fort. Sergeant Kimball on that day being in charge of the police, was engaged in recovering the barge, and while lifting it so as to float it, he ruptured himself in the right groin. During this period of service, in 1813, the fort was threatened by the enemy with an attack, and again in 1814. The garrison was at one time in daily expectation of it. In December, 1815, he was ordered to join Capt. Whiting at Fort Preble, in Portland, Me., where he remained until discharged, April 22, 1817. He again enlisted on the 22d of June, 1817, in the Second Battalion, Ninth Division, and although the inspector objected to him on account of his disability, he was received upon the recommendations of his officers, particularly Capt. Walbach, then promoted to a higher rank, who said that from his correct deportment, strict attention, and obedience, his sobriety and intelligence, he was a most useful non-commissioned officer in the discharge of garrison duty. He continued at Fort Preble until he was transferred to Rhode Island, where he remained until he was discharged in 1822. After this he attempted to support his family by keeping a sailors' boarding house, but was not very successful. (From the rolls at Washington, D. C.)

His Excellency

CHRISTOPHER GORE ESQUIRE

Governor and Commander in Chief

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

To Leonard Kimball Esquire Greeting:

C. GORE.

You being appointed on the third day of July A. D. One Thousand eight Hundred and nine by Major General Elias Hasket Derby of the Second Division of the Militia of this Commonwealth to be his Aid-de-Camp

Reposing Special trust and confidence in your ability, courage and good conduct, I do by Virtue of the Power vested in me, Commission you accordingly, with the Rank of Major. You will therefore, with fidelity and honour discharge the Duty of that Office, according to the laws and Regulations provided for governing and regulating the Militia. And you will observe and follow all such orders as you shall receive from the Major-General and others your superior Officers Given under my Hand and the Seal of the Commonwealth the fifth day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and nine and the thirty third year of the independance of the United States of America.

By his Excellency the Governor

William Tudor Secretary of the Commonwealth.

He qualified July 8, 1809. Previous to his marriage Judge Joseph Story wrote him the following letter:

Salem Aug. 2, 1822.

Dear Sir—I yesterday received your letter of the 29th of July. I certainly can have no objection to stating my opinion of your character, so far as my own knowledge will warrant. In respect to your family connections I can say nothing because they do not reside in this town, and I never had the pleasure of an acquaintance with them. During your residence in this town I can very cheerfully state that your conduct & character were, as far as I had any knowledge or information, entirely unexceptionable; and your acquaintance & associations were with the first society in the place. I have always considered you as a gentleman of perfectly correct habits, manners & principles; and your public education and acquirements secured you general respect among our best citizens. I should use stronger language if the delicate situation in which your letter places me, did not incline me to great caution. I should be truly glad to hear, that you are successful in your present attachment—for after all I consider domestic life as the truest as well as the most constant source of happiness—but as this letter is to pass under the eye of a parent, justly anxious for the happiness of a daughter, I feel scrupulous in using any expressions which might seem rather to result from personal regard, than from judgment.

I am with great respect your obedient friend and servant
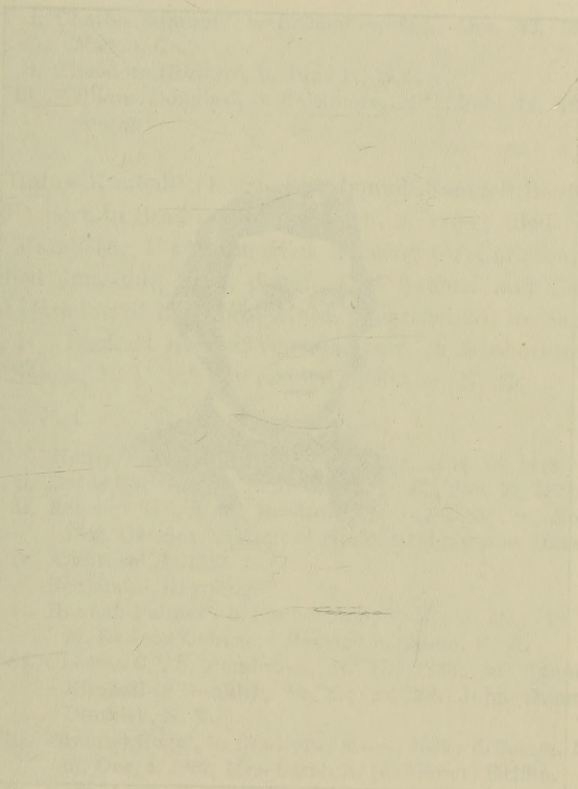
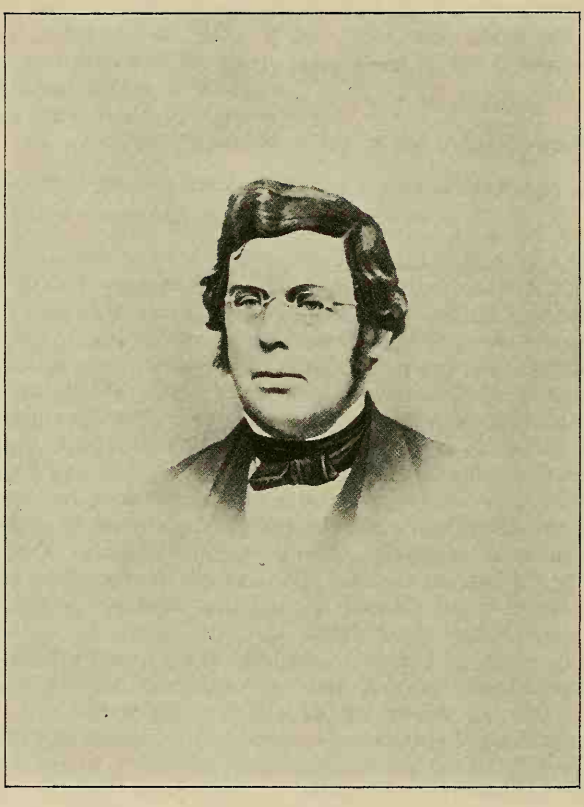
Joseph Story

Leonard Kimball Esq.
Baltimore.

Similar letters were sent by Leverett Saltonstall of Salem,





EDMUND KIMBALL.

Mass., and Harrison Gray Otis of Boston, Mass. The latter mentions the fact that he lived several years in Boston, Mass. After his marriage he lived in Baltimore, Md., and Philadelphia, Pa.

Resided in Bradford, Mass. He served his native town for many years in various public offices, and was its representative and senator in the general court of Massachusetts for several successive terms. In early life he was a dealer in morocco. Later his time was largely occupied with positions of trust, his integrity of character making him the recipient of many such positions. He filled such positions for over forty years with faithfulness, and was a helpful friend to the fatherless and the widow. He was loved and honored by all who knew him and shared the hospitality of his home. He is especially remembered by the boys of his day for many hearty invitations to ride or to help themselves to the tempting fruit in his orchard. A man of strong principles, he took a leading part for the abolition of slavery. He was for many years superintendent of the Sunday school and deacon of the First Parish church of Haverhill. He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity.

710 Josiah Kimball[7] (David[6], Aaron[5], Richard[4], John[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born in Boxford, Mass., April 6, 1790; died Boston, Mass., Oct. 24, 1878; married Dec. 30, 1833, Mary Wood Spofford, born Feb. 22, 1799, died Nov. 2, 1888, daughter of Parker and Abby (Hale) Spofford. He lived in Boxford until May 20, 1852, when he moved to Lawrence, Mass. From there he went to Boston, in December, 1859, and lived in this city until he died. He was an active man, held many offices of trust, both public and private, being frequently called upon to settle estates. In Boxford he held about all the public offices that it was possible for him to hold. He was repeatedly selectman and overseer of the poor, he was town treasurer for a number of years, and when he left Boxford he had served more years on the school committee than any other man living in the town. He was parish clerk for many years, and also served for a long time on the parish committee and board of assessors. He was deacon of the first church in Boxford, which office he resigned about the time he left the town. In 1830 several thousand dollars were raised by subscription as a permanent parish fund, the annual interest of the same to be applied towards the payment of the salary of an Orthodox Congregational minister settled in the parish. He contributed to this fund, and was one of the original trustees of the fund, his name appearing in the act of incorporation. He was a member of the legislature in the year 1838, when the subject of licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors was so fully discussed and what was called the fifteen-gallon law was enacted. At this time his name was recorded on the side of temperance, he having been a consistent temperance man from the earliest stages of the temperance reform. A few years before his death he became much interested in the history of his family and collected a number of notes in regard to them. From these we select the following in regard to his father, David Kimball. The notes came into our possession too late to insert in the proper place:

"At the age of nineteen my father was chosen to assist Deacon Aaron Kimball in setting the Psalm, so saith the record. My father was chorister for many years, and until he had an attack of bronchitis, which so affected his organs of speech that for months he could not speak except in a kind of coarse whisper. That illness terminated his services as chorister."

"I presume my father had about as perfect a tenor voice as ever falls to the lot of mankind. Mr. Holyoke repeatedly spake of my father's voice and singing. He remarked that 'When your father led off with the tenor, my blood would thrill from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet,' and that in all his intercourse with musicians, and in all the schools that he had taught, he never met with a man who had so good a tenor voice, and added that 'If I had his voice I would go to Europe and make an independent fortune in a few years.' Mr. Jacob Kimball of Topsfield, also a noted musician, expressed similar views in regard to my father's voice and singing, and told me of a concert which was held in the meeting-house in Boxford, which he attended when he was a young man, and said, 'I thought at that time that I was quite a smart singer, but when I heard your father sing I found that he was far in advance of me.'"

H., Jan. 18, 1801; died July, 1880; married Sept. 26, 1830, Philena Hastings, daughter of Benjamin Hastings of Greenfield, Mass. In 1812 he removed with his father's family to Madison, Lake Co., Ohio, in the Western Reserve. There he lived for nearly seventy years. During his active life he occupied numerous positions of public trust and responsibility. In the early history of the Reserve great attention was given to military matters, and most of the settlers belonged to the militia organizations. As a young man he was much interested in these organizations, and organized and commanded a company. By regular promotion he reached the rank of brigadier-general, which explains the title by which he was familiarly known. He was sheriff for two terms, and represented Lake county three terms in the legislature. He served the township in the capacities of township trustee, real estate appraiser, and justice of the peace, holding the latter office several terms. While serving from Lake county in the legislature he obtained of his own motion, unsolicited by his constituents, the charter of the Cleveland, Painesville & Ashtabula Railroad Co., and designated its incorporators. He was actively interested in and connected with the organization of the company, secured subscriptions to its capital stock, and also the right of way for its road. He presided at the meeting in Cleveland at which the company was organized, served as its treasurer, collecting the subscriptions, and continuing in that relation to the company until his infirmities compelled him to retire. He was actively connected with the religious movements of the town. He united with the Second church, March 1, 1834. About 1855, as the result of an injury which seemed slight at the time, but developed into a spinal difficulty, he lost the use of his legs, and was confined to his chair for the last seventeen years of his life.

He was graduated from Harvard College in the class of 1814, of which Prescott, the historian, and James Walker, afterwards president of Harvard College, were members. He commenced the study of law in Boston, Mass., spending some time in the office of Daniel Webster. He practised law for some years, withdrawing from practice about 1840. He retired to his estate in Wenham, where he lived until his death. He was elected representative in the legislature from Boston in 1820, was afterwards state senator, and represented Wenham in the general court. He was one of the old school of polished gentlemen, and through his kindness and urbanity commanded the respect and affection of all who came in contact with him. (He became possessed of the idea that the name Kimball was wrongly spelled, taking this notion from some old documents on file at Salem. He did not change the spelling of his own name, but his children have adopted the spelling Kemble. This spelling, as we have shown elsewhere, is not the correct one; the old spelling of Kemble, as occasionally found on the old records, is merely the mistaken spelling of illiterate persons.)

After living two years with his father on his farm, he lived two years on a farm in Northfield. He moved to Boscawen in the spring of 1824 and purchased the farm on High street then known as the Frost place. In 1830 he purchased of Hon. Jeremiah Mason of Portsmouth, attorney for the U. S. bank, its lands and water power at the south part of the town (now Penacook). He removed there and resided in the house he had bought, situated next east of the hotel. He was an active and influential business man. In 1831 he built the lower dam across the Contoocook river, and erected and put in operation the brick grist and flouring mill now in use. This was the first improvement of the water power at the upper falls, now the center of the growing village of Penacook. In company with his cousin, William Moody Kimball, he carried on an extensive lumber trade. In the March preceding his death he was elected to represent the town in the legislature, but his health did not permit him to take his seat. His wife died at the house of her son, John, with whom she had lived as a widow forty years, Oct. 22, 1874.

H.; married 2d, Jan. 4, 1859, Kate (Brown) Rowe, born ——, died Concord, N. H., Feb. 6, 1879, daughter of Matthew Nealey Brown of Canterbury, N. H. He was educated at Phillips Academy, Exeter, where he was graduated in 1825. After following the mercantile business in Canterbury and Northfield ten years, in 1836 he moved to South Boscawen, N. H., and opened a store for the sale of goods, taking in Luther G. Johnson as partner. They were the first tradesmen in what is now Penacook. Changes in the business were made, Mr. Johnson removed to Minneapolis, and Mr. Kimball to Concord, where he went into business. Those interested in the study of heredity will notice these facts: Jeremiah Kimball was the seventh generation from Richard[1] through his son Richard. Harvey Kimball belonged to the same generation, through Benjamin[2], and there had been no inter-marriages between the two tribes. Therefore they were fifth cousins, yet they looked enough alike to be twin brothers. Their hair and eyes were the same, they had the same remarkable memory, either of them would entertain his listeners by recounting the public speeches and sermons they had heard, giving the time, place, subject, and general drift of the remarks, from their early youth to their old age. Other characteristics, mental and physical, were equally well marked. The author, L. A. Morrison, knew them both and was wonderfully struck with the strong resemblance between them in many ways. No children.

825 Joseph Smith Kimball[7] (Joseph[6], Joseph[5], John[4], Caleb[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born in Canterbury, N. H., Oct. 27, 1806; died East Concord, N. H., May 7, 1888; married Dec. 11, 1831, Lydia Leavitt Greeley, daughter of Joseph Greeley of Gilmanton, N. H. At the age of eighteen he was apprenticed to his cousin, Benjamin, to learn the trade of a millwright, a business successfully carried on by himself and other members of the family for many years. After his marriage he lived in a house built by himself, situated just south of the Union meeting-house in Canterbury, where he lived until 1840, when he removed to the homestead of his father-in-law in Gilmanton. Later in life he went to East Concord, N. H. He represented the town of Gilmanton in the legislature of 1866–'67.

H., Dec. 4, 1808; died Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 5, 1884; married Jan. 8, 1835, Lucy Jane Johnson, daughter of Reuben and Judith (Hall) Johnson of Boscawen. He learned the trade of a millwright with his brother Joseph. He went to Boscawen in 1832, and was a partner in business with his cousin, Benjamin. He was frequently elected to fill various offices in town. In 1835 he was an owner in the valuable water-power, now the basis of the manufacturing village of Penacook. In early life he was successfully engaged in building factories, mills, and machinery in New Hampshire and Massachusetts. From 1846 to 1857 he was employed by one of the large manufacturing companies in the city of Lawrence, as their agent. In 1857 he removed with his family to Minneapolis, Minn., where he resided until he died. During the war he served as quartermaster of Gen. Sibley's expedition against the Sioux Indians. After the close of the war he was employed by the U. S. Government in building and repairing public buildings at Key West, Fla., Wheeling, West Va., and other places.

She was adopted as a child by Robert Stanton, who married Capt. Holmes's mother's sister. When Capt. Holmes was about sixteen he went to live with his uncle in Preston, and a few years after married Mercy. They inherited the Stanton homestead and spent their lives on it. It is in that part of Preston which now is in the town of Griswold. Capt. Holmes was active in military matters. He was among the volunteers who defended the coast of Connecticut during the War of 1812. He served as sergeant under Capt. Joseph Lester at New London and Groton, and was at the bombardment of Stonington Point on the 9th of August, 1814. After the war he was captain of the Fifth Co., Eighteenth Regt., Third Brigade, Connecticut Militia. He was honorably discharged Aug. 8, 1820, on account of ill health. In private life he was a good husband, a kind father, and an upright Christian gentleman, whose good advice and judgment was often sought by his friends. He was elected to a number of offices of trust in the town, and was a member of the Preston City Baptist church.

933 Chester Kimball[7] (Sterry[6], Daniel[5], Jacob[4], John[3], John[2], Richard[1]) born in Montgomery Co., N. Y., Dec. 11, 1807; died Ansonia, Pa., Sept. 24, 1845; married Nov. 29, 1835, Ann Marie Ter Bush, born Albany Co., N. Y., Aug. 25, 1808, died Feb. 29, 1876, daughter of Jonas and Polly N. (Tenchley) Ter Bush. Her grandfather, Peter Ter Boss, came from Holland before the Revolution, and served in the army. For this service he was granted six hundred acres of land in Duchess Co., N. Y. Chester served a number of years in the regular army of the United States, Co. G, Fifth U. S. Infantry, enlisting at first for five years, June 15, 1829, at Rochester, and then re-enlisting for five years more, March 3, 1836. He served all through the Black Hawk War, and was at Green Bay when Black Hawk was captured. He saw Black Hawk in battle several times, and on one occasion he was in a detachment which Black Hawk supposed was militia, but when he found they were regulars he retreated. The soldiers in the Black Hawk War suffered great hardships and privations, numbers dying of fever and exposure. It was reported at one time that Chester was dead, and his wife not hearing from him for a long time married one Amos Orton, by whom she had Jane Orton, born July 14, 1844, and Nathan Orton, born July 24, 1846. He had been severely wounded, but finally recovered sufficiently to start for home, where he arrived to find his wife married to another. The shock was a severe one to him, and he immediately left to visit his relatives in Pennsylvania. His health being much broken by his wound and the hardships he had undergone, he never recovered, and a few months later died. He lived in New York state most of his life, except the time he spent in the army. He was a livery stable keeper.

1020 Richard Kimball[7] (William[6], Richard[5], Joseph[4], Richard[3], Thomas[2], Richard[1]) b. Sept. 26, 1803; married, 1830, Esther Barker, born Lovel, Nov. 15, 1809, daughter of Capt. Stephen and Betsey (Andrews) Barker of Lovel. H. F. Andrews writes in regard to this family: "Richard was a wild and wayward youth. He eloped with his future wife and was not heard from for years until she returned for a visit to her native town about 1853. In 1865 Mr. Andrews's father visited them at their home in Lake Co., Indiana, where they were engaged in farming. He and his son had just returned from service in an Indiana regiment in the Union army. One or two sons had died in childhood; also a married daughter, who left two little girls, who were residing with their grandparents. Three children were then living. Esther, his wife, has since died."

1022 Moses Day Kimball[7] (Daniel[6], Daniel[5], Joseph[4], Richard[3], Thomas[2], Richard[1]) born in that part of Bradford which is now Groveland, Feb. 23, 1807; died March 15, 1871; married Nov. 10, 1847, Louise Catherine Wales, born March 4, 1812, died June 2, 1848, daughter of Thomas B. Wales, commission merchant doing business in Boston; married 2d, May 12, 1853, Susan Tillinghast Morton, born April 16, 1826, and still living. She was the daughter of Governor Marcus Morton of Massachusetts, and Charlotte (Hodges) Morton, granddaughter of Nathaniel Morton, born June 1, 1753, who, with his father, Nathaniel Morton, served from Freetown, Mass., in the Army of the Revolution. Moses Day Kimball took his name from Moses Day of Bradford, Mass., his great grandfather, who was the son of Moses Day and Abigail Kimball[3], daughter of Benjamin Kimball[2]. He was an excellent example of the alert, energetic descendant of the early New Englanders. Like many of his generation he left the country for the city, there to display the same energy in building up commerce that his ancestors had displayed in clearing the forests for their farms. He had all the courage of a successful worker, and was a man of unimpeachable honor and integrity. In business he was decided and energetic. He was personally unselfish, and his private life was admirable. He was humane, simple, generous, fond of nature and little children. For his family no sacrifice was too great for him to make. His too great business activity eventually broke him down and shortened his life, but the strength of his character left a lasting memory with those who remain. He commenced his business life with his brother-in-law, Abel Page, of Haverhill, Mass. In 1835 he came to Boston and was in business with the firm of Webster & Chase, dry goods merchants on Kilby street. Some years later he became a partner in the firm of Faulkner, Kimball & Co., commission merchants on Franklin street, Boston, Mass. He was for many years president of the Atlas Bank of Boston, and was a stanch member of the old Brattle-street Unitarian church.

He was graduated at Hamilton College in 1822, and afterwards at the Andover, Mass., Theological Seminary. He was a minister and a teacher. In a letter from him when he was 94 years old he says: "I quit the use of rum in 1811, of cider in 1813, of tea and coffee in 1830, and I never used tobacco. I once had a dread of death. But in great mercy my Lord has taken it away. So I now, though a marvel to myself, and to many for my activity and comfort, look with delightful hope to release from this mortal frame, to enjoy a pure immortal body like our Lord's after his rising from the dead. If restored to the image of God we shall be fitted to drink of the river of His pleasures. May we be thus restored and thus drink." At the time of his death he was the oldest living graduate of Andover. He was a home missionary at one time, preached in Rochester, N. Y., and was settled in Ohio. 1045 George Kimball[7] (Benjamin[6], George[5], Thomas[4], Thomas[3], Thomas[2], Richard[1]) born in Harvard, Mass., May 18, 1782; died in the Bermuda Islands in 1856; married in the Bermudas, a wealthy lady. William A. Wallace of Canaan, N. H., gives the following account of him: "He was graduated at Dartmouth College in the class of 1809. Read law, was admitted to the bar, and settled in practice at Union, Me., in 1813. Was afterwards for several years a successful teacher at Concord, N. H., Richmond, Va., and in Bermuda. Returning home he practised law in Concord, N. H., and edited the Concord Register. In 1827 he came to Canaan to practise law. I began my Latin course with him. He was a most excellent teacher, but a slip-shod lawyer, who never had his cases ready until after trial, when he would wonder why he had not been ready on time. Liberal, large hearted, sympathetic, he was early an active, earnest abolitionist. He left Canaan in 1836 and wandered West, and was standing by Lovejoy when he was murdered in Alton, Ill., in 1837. Then he took his wife back to Bermuda, where he died in 1858. He was a scholarly, intelligent old man, and I always liked him, for he acted as if he knew that he had once been a boy." He taught the select school in Amherst, N. H., in 1807, and belonged to the Franklin literary society at that place.

Early in life he left his New Hampshire home and enlisted in the Texan army and fought for the independence of the state. After its achievement his brother-in-law, Col. Rhodes, was U. S. consul at Galveston, and his brother, John P. Kimball, was active in organizing the government, and Eliphalet assisted in translating the old Mexican laws from Spanish into English. For this and other services for Texas he never received any compensation. After a visit to New Hampshire he spent some time in Texas. He then traveled through several states selling medicines which he manufactured. He thus supported himself until he was eighty years of age, when he drifted to Hartford, Conn. Unavailing efforts were made to get him a pension from the state of Texas. He was very poor, and for ten years kind friends ministered to him. He possessed good natural powers and was temperate and strictly honest.

1067 Jesse Kimball[7] (James[6], Benjamin[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Bradford, Mass., April 15, 1792; died Dec. 19, 1846; married Oct., 1819, Lucretia Kimball, born May 19, 1797, died Dec. 8, 1823, daughter of Judge John Kimball of Barton, Vt. Much of her early life was spent at her grandfather's in Concord, N. H., where she united with the Congregational church when sixteen years of age. In 1818 she entered the academy at Bradford, Mass., and boarded at the house of Col. James Kimball, a cousin of her father's. She there became acquainted with his son Jesse, her second cousin, whom she married. She died at the age of twenty-three at her home in Bradford. Her short life was long enough to impress all who knew her with the purity of her character, the strength of her intellect, and the depth and sincerity of her piety. Her memory was very precious to her friends, and such were all who had ever known her. He married 2d, Abigail Kimball, born Sept. 28, 1800, died Feb., 1856, daughter of Benjamin Kimball. She survived him and married June 3, 1850, John Brewster for his second wife. Deacon Jesse Kimball was a rare man. He had fine natural endowments and possessed great excellence of character. He was an earnest, conscientious Christian, a deacon in the Congregational church in Bradford, Mass., a leading citizen of the town, and a strong helper in all benevolent enterprises. He often filled public positions, was repeatedly elected to the Massachusetts legislature, and at his death was deeply lamented. He resided in Bradford, Mass.

1070 James Kimball[7] (Joab[6], Richard[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Peacham, Vt., Nov. 25, 1799; died Indianapolis, Ind., at the home of his cousin, Samuel Merrill, Nov. 25, 1838. In disposition he was kind, gentle, and affectionate, was warmly attached to his friends and kindred. He was energetic and had good executive abilities. He was a farmer.

1071 Harvey Kimball[7] (Joab[6], Richard[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Enfield, N. H., Feb. 25, 1801; died Jan. 12, 1879, at the home of his sister, Charlotte L. Hills, in Pelham, N. H. Single. He was by trade a tailor. At different periods he was employed on a farm and in woolen mills in Amesbury and Lawrence, Mass., South Berwick, Me., Dover, N. H., and elsewhere. There were many eccentricities in his character. His native powers of mind were excellent. His memory was most marvellous. Nearly every clergyman to whom he had listened was remembered with his text and the subject matter of his sermon. Every public and political speaker whom he had ever heard he would accurately describe and quote many of his words. He was a great reader, acquired a vast fund of information, and had a personal acquaintance with many people in the numerous places in which he lived.

1072 Leonard Worcester Kimball[7] (Joab[6], Richard[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Peacham, Vt., June 16, 1802; died Boston, Mass., Oct. 15, 1835; married July 16, 1829, Phebe S. Pillsbury of Newburyport, Mass., born ——, died May 31, 1834. She was an attractive and excellent woman. He was a fine scholar. He received his academical education at Bradford academy under Preceptor Benjamin Greenleaf. He was a printer and carried on his business in Boston, Mass. In manner he was attractive and pleasing, of strict integrity, and his personal friends were many.

CHILDREN.

i. Leonard Augustus[8], b. Boston, Mass.; d. young.

ii. Charles Stuart[8], b. Boston, Feb. 23, 1834. After the death of his parents he lived with his aunt, Eleanor R. Morrison, in Windham, N. H., until Nov., 1849, when he went to live with his aunt, Eliza R. Field, in Gowanda, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y. He was bright and sparkling with wit. He was for a time in Buffalo, N. Y. He died of typhoid fever Oct. 21, 1856, while attending the academy in Austinburg, Ashtabula Co., O., in his twenty-third year. He was buried in the private cemetery of Dr. Chester of that city.

1073 Eliza Reed Kimball[7] (Joab[6], Richard[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Peacham, Vt., Nov. 9, 1803. In early life she left home and went to reside with her relative, Col. James Kimball, in Bradford, Mass. She received her education at Bradford academy, then under charge of Miss Hazeltine. She afterwards lived with her uncle, John Burley of Beverly, Mass. She was for some years a teacher in a select school at Andover, Mass., living in the family of Dr. Elias Cornelius. Afterwards she taught at Montpelier, Vt. At the latter place she met and married May 14, 1833, Dr. Seth Field. Dr. Field was born in Leverett, Mass., March 20, 1797. He was a son of Jonathan Field and a relative of Cyrus Field. He received his academical education at Amherst, Mass., and his medical training at Hanover, N. H. In 1821 he studied with Dr. Shedd, and was graduated from Hanover Medical college Oct. 3, 1822. He practised in Barre, Vt., from 1824 to 1832. He married 1st, March 20, 1827, Sarah E. Ellis, died March 1, 1831, daughter of Judge Ellis of Barre. After his second marriage he removed to Gowanda, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and afterwards resided in that place. Dr. Field was a successful physician, possessed sound sense and judgment. He was held in high esteem by his fellow citizens, and was elected to the assembly of New York in 1844. He died of congestion of the brain, Aug 5, 1855. She resided (in 1896) in Gowanda, N. Y. They had no children.

1074 Eleanor Reed Kimball[7] (Joab[6], Richard[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Peacham, Vt., Sept. 4, 1808; died of consumption, at Windham, N. H., Aug. 5, 1866. Her daughter, Mrs. M. Lizzie Park of Belfast, Me., writes as follows: "It is difficult to convey in words a faithful portraiture of her life and character, so quiet, so gentle, so full of faith and good works. Fond of study in her youth, she acquired a good education at the academies at Montpelier, Vt., and Bradford, Mass., and was a successful teacher for several years. She was untiring in her devotion as daughter, wife, and mother; unmindful of herself in her ministration to others; generous and charitable in an eminent degree in thought and word in her estimate of others, and retiring and unassuming in her own disposition. At the age of eighteen she became a member of the Congregational church, and honored her profession by a life made beautiful by Christian graces." She married at Bradford, Mass., Jan. 27, 1836, Jeremiah Morrison of Windham, N. H., born April 20, 1795, died of heart disease, caused by asthma, at Windham, N. H., Nov. 24, 1862. He was the son of Dea. Samuel Morison and Mrs. Margaret (Dinsmoor[1]) (Armour) Morison[2]. Dea. Samuel Morrison, father of Jeremiah, was born Sept. 28, 1748, and was the son of Lieut. Samuel Morison, born in Ireland in 1704, died in Windham, N. H., in 1776. He was the son of Charter James Morison, who settled in Londonderry, N. H., in 1719, and who was born in the north of Ireland or Scotland in 1675, and as a boy was in the siege of Londonderry, Ireland, in 1688–'89, and died in Londonderry, N. H., in 1756. He was the son of John Mor-

[1] The Dinsmoor family is Scotch. Margaret Dinsmoor[6] was the daughter of William Dinsmoor[5] of Windham, N. H., and sister of the elder Gov. Samuel Dinsmoor[6]. She was the grand-daughter of Robert Dinsmoor[4] of Windham, N. H., who was born in Ballywattick, Ballymoney, county of Antrim, Ireland. He was the son of John Dinsmoor[3], who was born in Ballywattick, and settled in Londonderry, N. H., about 1723. His father was John Dinsmoor[2], an emigrant from Scotland to Ballywattick, Ireland, who was the son of Laird Dinsmoor[1], who lived at Achenmead, on the bank of the river Tweed, in Scotland.

[2] The Morison family is an ancient one. Its history is traced back for centuries. Its earliest known home was in the Island of Lewis, one of the Hebrides, on the northwest coast of Scotland. The Morisons were the Hereditary Judges of that island. An ancient writer named Morison asserts that all the Morisons of Scotland and elsewhere are descended from the family on that island.

ison, a sturdy Scotchman, born in Scotland in 1628, according to tradition, emigrated to Ireland, was in the siege of Londonderry, 1688–'89, and died in Londonderry, N. H., at the reputed age of 108 years. Jeremiah Morrison succeeded his parents on the homestead in Windham, where he spent his life. In his personal bearing he was courteous and genial. His judgment was excellent. Matters that he was called to decide he weighed with nice discrimination in the sensitively poised balance of his mind. He seldom erred in judgment or in his analysis of the character and motives of men. He was calm and collected, arrived at his conclusions slowly and with deliberation. Combining these qualities with a strict conscientiousness, it seldom became necessary for him to change his opinions, as they were seldom wrong. Having formed his opinions, he clung to them with great tenacity. He was among the earliest to espouse the anti-slavery cause, and at a time when it was unpopular. For its success he worked and voted to the end of his life. He lived to behold the glimmering rays of the morning of that glorious day which ushered in freedom for an enslaved race. For many years he was a member of the Presbyterian church. He was an earnest worker in the Sunday school, of which he was superintendent for many years. He also took great interest in the church and in the religious society. He was active in town affairs, occupying at different times most of the prominent positions in the town government. He was a member of the constitutional convention in 1850, and represented his town in the legislatures of 1825 and 1826, 1841 and 1852. He held a commission as justice of the peace for a long period, and did considerable business of a public nature.

CHILDREN, BORN IN WINDHAM, N. H.

i. Christopher Merrill Morrison[8], b. Dec. 2, 1836; d. of consumption Dec. 22, 1857. His sister, M. Lizzie (Morrison) Park, thus writes concerning him: "From a child he was of a thoughtful mind, mature in judgment, conscientious in character, and as years passed these qualities were still more strongly defined. His purpose and desire were to obtain a liberal education, and for this object he entered the academy at Atkinson, N. H., preparatory to a college course. While there his attention was strongly directed towards religious subjects, and the result was that he entered with his whole heart and soul upon a new life, which brought with it strength to bear and suffer during a long and painful illness, and fitted him for that rest which remaineth for the people of God. For nearly two years before his death he was a member of the Presbyterian church in Windham, N. H. He had nearly finished his preparatory course when disease laid its wasting hand upon him. While giving up the studies in which he delighted, and all the plans of his earthly future which were dear to him, he cheerfully obeyed the summons 'Come up higher.'"

ii. Margaret Elizabeth Morrison[8], b. Windham, N. H., Dec. 25, 1838; m. Jan. 29, 1868, Horace Park, b. Feb. 29, 1837, son of Capt. Andrew and Margaret (Morrison) Park of Belfast, Me. He resides on the homestead in Belfast, and has been connected with the city government. She was educated at the seminary for young ladies in Bradford, Mass. A few months before the time at which she expected to be graduated, an event to which she had looked forward with bright anticipations as the crown of her years of faithful study, she was called home by the illness of her brother. Her life plan was given up, and for several years she ministered to those who were dearest to her. During the long illness of her two brothers, her father, and her mother, she cared for them with the most tender affection. At their deaths much of love and happiness departed from her childhood's home, and she was soon after married. She was a member of the Presbyterian church in Windham, N. H. Her membership has been transferred to the Congregational church in Belfast, Me., where she has resided since her marriage. Children: 1. Mabel Agnes Park[9], b. July 18, 1875. Resides in Belfast, Me. 2. Edward Horace Park[9], b. Aug. 9, 1877. Resides in Belfast, Me.

iii. Edward Payson Morrison[8], b. Jan. 28, 1840; d. Aug. 5, 1858. Mrs. Park, his sister, writes as follows: "Very early in life he showed that he possessed an active mind, quick to acquire and strong to retain, which developed into a decided and eager taste for literary pursuits. At the age of thirteen he became a member of the academy at Atkinson, N. H., where he finished his preparatory course, intending at once to enter college. While teaching in the winter of 1857–'58 the first symptoms of consumption were manifested. From these he never recovered. Like his brother, he early became a member of the Presbyterian church, and strengthened and sustained by a like precious faith, he gave up the bright hopes of his youth and the brilliant promise of his future, and cheerfully laid down his life while it was yet morning. He died at Peacham, Vt., where he had gone in the hope of regaining his health, at the early age of eighteen years, six months, and eighteen days.

"Death cannot come
To him untimely, who is fit to die;
The less of this cold world, the more of Heaven,
The briefer life, the earlier immortality."

iv. Donald Roderick Morrison[8], b. Aug. 21, 1841; d. Sept. 19, 1841.

v. Leonard Allison Morrison[8], b. Feb. 21, 1843. Was educated in the common schools of Windham, at the academy in Gowanda, N. Y., and at the seminary at Sanbornton Bridge, now Tilton, N. H. He occupies and owns the homestead in Windham, N.H. He takes a strong interest in the public affairs in the town. He served as a selectman in 1871–'72, and in those years aided in the establishment of the Nesmith Free Public Library, which contains three thousand volumes, and of which he became a trustee. He presided as moderator in the annual town meetings for fifteen years. He has been a justice of the peace since 1869, was an enumerator of the 10th U. S. census in 1880. One of the county auditors 1886–'87. He is a republican in politics and has taken an active part in the party. He was a member of the New Hampshire republican state committee in 1881–'82. In 1884 he was elected a member of the New Hampshire house of representatives for two years, serving from June, 1885, to June, 1887. Was chairman of the committee on education, and successfully piloted to the statute book the bill establishing the town system of schools. In 1886 he was elected state senator from the Londonderry district to serve from June, 1887, to June, 1889. In the senate he was made chairman of the committee on education, and served on the committee on engrossed bills, on agriculture, and on state prison and industrial school. Since 1861 he has been a contributor to the public press, newspapers, and magazines. Since 1878 his time has been largely given to literary work, politics, and foreign travel. In 1878 to 1880 he prepared "The History of the Morison or Morrison Family," an octavo volume with twenty pages of illustrations, published in 1880 by A. Williams & Co. of Boston, Mass. An edition of 1,100 copies was printed. This was favorably received by the family and the press, and copies found their way to Scotland, England, Ireland, Australia, and to all parts of the United States and Canada, and the edition was quickly exhausted. In 1880 he commenced the "History of Windham in New Hampshire," upon which he spent three years of unceasing toil. It was published by Cupples, Upham & Co., Boston, Mass. It is an octavo volume of 872 pages, with 60 pages of illustrations. Less than one thousand copies were printed and the edition was exhausted in a short time. Copies are now at a high premium. In 1882 he wrote a condensed history of Windham, which appeared in the history of Rockingham and Strafford counties, N. H. In 1884 he spent several months in Europe, engaged in historical research and in travel. Several months were spent in the Scotch settlements in Ireland, in Scotland, and in England, visiting many towns, consulting different libraries, and making the acquaintance of many distinguished people. In 1887 he published, as the result of his travel and investigation, "Rambles in Europe; in Ireland, Scotland, England, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, and France; With Historical Facts Relating to Scotch-American Families, Gathered in Scotland and the North of Ireland." This was an octavo volume of 351 pages with illustrations. In 1889 he again visited Europe for historical purposes, travelling extensively in Ireland, Wales, Scotland, England, Switzerland, France, and Italy, and in 1891 his "Among the Scotch-Irish, and Through Seven Countries," was published. He wrote a "Supplement to the History of Windham in New Hampshire" (1892); prepared "The History and Proceedings of the Celebration of the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Incorporation of Windham in New Hampshire, Held June 9th, 1892." He is the author of "The Lineage and Biographies of the Norris Family," (1892); "History of the Alison or Allison Family in Europe and America," (1893); "History of the Sinclair Family in Europe and America," a work of 518 pages with illustrations, published in 1896; he is joint author with Prof. S. P. Sharples of Cambridge, Mass., of "The History of the Kimball Family in Europe and America." Mr. Morrison's literary and historical work has completely absorbed his mind, and he has engaged in it with great enthusiasm and delight. In recognition of his services to history and genealogy, Dartmouth College in 1884 conferred on him the honorary degree of master of arts. He was elected a life member of the New Hampshire Historical Society in 1893, and was elected vice-president for New Hampshire of "The Scotch-Irish Society of America" in 1894, and re-elected in 1895. He is unmarried. Resides Canobie Lake, Windham, N. H.

1075 Jesse Merrill Kimball[7] (Joab[6],Richard[5],Benjamin[4],Richard[3],Benjamin[2],Richard[1]) born in Danville, Vt., June 19, 1809; died June 24, 1860; married New York city June 18, 1850, Elizabeth C. Robbins, born Weathersfield, Conn., Sept. 23, 1823, daughter of Ashur and Elizabeth (Chapin) Robbins. At the age of sixteen he united with the Congregational church at Cabot, Vt., and through life maintained a true Christian character. He was educated at the academy at Montpelier, Vt. He soon engaged in business in Boston, Mass., and afterwards removed to New York. He continued in business in that city and resided in Brooklyn, N. Y. He died at the home of his brother-in-law, Rev. George A. Bryan, in West Haven, Conn., and was buried at Rockyhill, Conn. H., and the State Normal school, Salem, Mass. She was a teacher for many years, in Nashua, N. H., for three years principal of a grammar school in Millbury, Mass., and then in Springfield, Mass. In 1882

she became a teacher in Bloemhoff seminary, Stellenbosch, South Africa, where she remained three years. The students there were the daughters of the Dutch, English, and French Huguenot settlers. In going to, and returning from, South Africa, she stopped in England, at the islands of Madeira and St. Helena. She travelled in Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and France. She returned to the United States in 1885, and gave a course of lectures on Africa and European countries to a class of young ladies. In Nov., 1886, she became a teacher in the Girls' High school, Brooklyn, N. Y., where (1896) she still remains. She is a Congregationalist, takes a deep interest in religious subjects, and is active in church work.

iii. Annie Elizabeth Hills[8], b. Sept. 15, 1860. She spent some months giving special attention to the study of music. Later she was a student at the State Normal school at Salem, Mass. Subsequently studied in an Illinois seminary, and after some years of teaching she took a special course of study at Bradford Academy, Bradford, Mass. She has been a teacher for a long time. She was first assistant for two years in Brighton academy, Illinois. For two years was principal of a grammar school at Warren, Mass., was then employed in a public school of Waltham, Mass. In 1885 she became assistant in the Gaston school for girls in Boston, Mass. In 1889 she accepted a position as teacher of Latin in the William Penn Charter school in Philadelphia, Pa. After four and a half years in that work, she resigned, and opened a private school for girls in that city. The school in 1896 numbered one hundred pupils with twelve teachers. She is a ready and fluent speaker and is at home before an audience. A member and active worker in the Congregational church. She early became interested in the Christian Endeavor movement, and in 1887 delivered an address at the international convention at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. During the summer of 1888 she gave a course of lectures on history before the Connecticut State School for Teachers. For many years she has contributed much to the press, and has written on educational themes for the New England Journal of Education, and on Christian Endeavor topics for the Golden Rule. In 1895 she crossed the Atlantic and visited England, Scotland, France, Germany, Switzerland, and the Netherlands. Her one "great aim in life has been to make the sum of human misery less, and the sum of human happiness greater." Resides in Philadelphia, Pa.

She was a small, active woman, a good wife and a loving and watchful mother. When the discovery of gold caused a wave of excitement to sweep over the country, he abandoned his farm to seek his fortune in the new Eldorado. He journeyed thither in 1850, by way of the Isthmus of Panama, first seeing that his wife and her children were comfortably settled in Glover, Vt. During the next four and a half years he suffered many hardships by sea and land. He returned home in 1854, bringing with him a comfortable supply of gold, the result of his toil and suffering, but he was much broken in health. After his return to Vermont he was actively engaged in the affairs of the town and county in which he resided. He was elected justice of the peace in 1855, and held this office for seventeen years. He was a trial justice, and very rarely were any of his decisions reversed by a higher court. He was a member of the state constitutional convention in 1870. He was a thoroughly good and highly respected citizen, beloved by his townsmen.

CHILD, BORN IN DARDENELLE, ARK.

1871 i. George Morrill[8], b. June 27, 1855. Resides Concord, N. H.

1102 George L. Kimball[7] (Samuel Ayer[6], John[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Concord, N. H., Nov. 2, 1828; died Concord, N. H., Aug. 29, 1892; married May 10, 1861, Mary E. Magness, born near Pine Bluff, Ark., July 7, 1838, daughter of Judge George and Parmelia (Murray) Magness of Yell Co., Ark. She belonged to a South Carolina family. She was educated at Dardenelle, and is a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

He was educated in the common schools and at the academies of Bradford, Mass., and Haverhill, N. H. He learned the printer's trade at what is now Laconia, N. H., and followed it for eight years at that place and at Concord, N. H., and Bath, Me. He was one of the proprietors of the Bath Daily Tribune in 1855. He sold his interest in this paper and went south in 1856. In January, 1856, he settled in Dardenelle, Ark., which has since been his home, except for about eighteen months during the war, when he was in St. Louis. He was first clerk for his brother, S. S. Kimball, and his partner, in the firm of Murdock & Kimball of Dardenelle. In 1862 he started a tannery and made some Confederate money. He abandoned the business in 1863 when the place was captured by U. S. troops. In 1863–'64 he accumulated nine bales of cotton, which he sold for $3,300 in greenbacks. In 1861 he was captain of Co. A, Twenty-sixth Regt. Ark. Militia, but was not in actual service. During the war he passed through some very exciting and dangerous scenes. In June, 1864, he sent his family to St. Louis, and finding that he would be obliged to go into one of the armies or be killed, he concluded to go to St. Louis. There he worked in a printing office. Then he was clerk on a steamboat in the service of the U. S. government. On his return to Dardenelle in October, 1865, he took $5,000 worth of goods with him, and was in trade on his own account till Aug. 13, 1866, when he took J. K. Perry as a partner. He sold out to Mr. Perry in 1881. He retired from business in comfortable circumstances. He has held various local offices and is high in the Masonic order. Early in life he was a Whig, and later a democrat, and was a member of the democratic national convention at Cincinnati. He was not a member of any church, though a believer in the Christian religion and contributing largely to its support.

1177a. Heber Chase Kimball[7] (Solomon F.[6], James[5], Jeremiah[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Sheldon, Vt., June 14, 1801; died Salt Lake City, Utah, June 22, 1868; married Nov. 7, 1822, Vilate Murray, born June 1, 1806, daughter of Roswell and Susanna Murray of Victor, N. Y. When he was eleven years old his parents removed to West Bloomfield, N. Y., where his father, who was a blacksmith, established a large shop in which he was taught the trade of blacksmithing. At the age of nineteen he was thrown on his own resources, his father having failed in business. Severe poverty to the extent of actual hunger was experienced by him at this time, but it was largely due to his shyness and timidity. He was relieved by his elder brother Charles, who taught him the potter's trade. His biographer, in speaking of his trials at this time, says: "He was a singular compound in his nature of courage and timidity, of weakness and strength, with a penchant for mirth and a proneness to melancholy, and blending the lion-like qualities of a leader of men with the bashfulness and lamb-like simplicity of a child." In 1820 he and Brigham Young were intimate friends, and this intimacy was kept up as long as he lived. Both became members of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints." In 1831 and in 1837 Heber C. Kimball went to England to introduce the doctrines of that church. He was accompanied by several other elders and remained in England about nine months, laboring in different parts with astonishing success. Whole villages were converted by his preaching and that of his companions, and churches were built up aggregating a membership of thousands. In 1840 he again went to England as a missionary, remaining about a year and again met with great success. In 1847 when Brigham Young became president of the church he chose Heber C. Kimball as his "first counselor" and Willard Richards as his second, these three comprising the presiding "quorum" of that remarkable community, which settled in the great American Desert a thousand miles from civilization, and there created a prosperous commonwealth lately admitted into the Union as the State of Utah. Second only to Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball stands among the founders of civilization in the Rocky Mountains, as a leader of the people who settled there. Pursuant to the prophetic foresight which was one of his strongest characteristics, he stored up grain when it was plentiful and when famine prevailed he relieved hundreds of families who were threatened with starvation. His life was filled with remarkable experiences and incidents, and when he died he left among his people a name that has ever since been held in love and reverence. (B. F. Cummings.)

He was among the earliest to embrace the teachings of Joseph Smith, and he was a devout and sincere follower of the doctrines laid down by the Prophet of the Mormons. His beliefs and views were fully shared by the wife of his youth. The biography of Heber Kimball has been written by his grandson, Orson P. Whitney, in an exceedingly interesting manner. It may be obtained by addressing his son, Solomon F. Kimball, Salt Lake City, Utah. We are indebted to Solomon F. Kimball for the portrait of his father which we have inserted.

He was one of the many sons of Major Daniel Dyer, who fought under General Stark at the Battle of Bennington, and who had a reputation in Vermont as a sheep raiser. His mother was Susan (Olin) Dyer, a woman noted for her remarkable energy and who secured the release from Portland jail of the prisoners who it was alleged had violated the alien and sedition laws. Matthew Lyon and others being unable to secure the enormous sum required for bail, Mrs. Dyer rode on horseback to the principal villages in the state, borrowed the family silver and gold of political friends, transported it unattended over a thousand miles, deposited it to the value of fifteen thousand dollars with the sheriff at Rutland, and obtained their release. From this stock came George Randolph Dyer, who is known throughout the state of Illinois as an active, hardy pioneer, who did much to build up the great Northwest. A distinguished abolitionist, a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln and Owen Lovejoy, he was one of the first to take up arms in defence of his country in the War of the Rebellion. Mrs. Dyer was a lady of fine natural endowments and graceful manners, whose excellent sense, fine culture, and domestic accomplishments eminently fitted her for a helpmate for a young, energetic, and ambitious man.

In middle life he removed to Lowell, Mass., where he was long in business. He was one of the earliest and strongest supporters of railroads in New England. He was a born leader of men and he had a mind of much force and originality. He was interested in religious matters, and was long an active and influential member of the High Street church in Lowell, Mass. In theology he was a close follower of Dr. Bushnell, and while liberal towards others in religious matters he was cautious and conservative in his views of life, and was inclined to rigid puritanism in matters of conduct. As a man he was charming, for his quaint and pithy sayings and his wide observation of men and things made his conversation very interesting and entertaining. In all the relations of life he was faithful and won the love and respect of all.

1258 David Tenney Kimball, Jr.[7],(David[6],Daniel[5],Nathaniel[4], Jonathan[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Ipswich, Mass., Sept. 7, 1808; died Lowell, Mass., March 29, 1886. He was graduated at Middlebury College in 1829, and at Andover, Mass., Theological Seminary in 1834. He was a strong abolitionist and attended the national anti-slavery convention held Dec. 6, 1833, and was one of its sixty-two original members. He was minister to a church in Hartford, Conn., for two years. Excessive work in a revival brought on bronchitis which he was unable to throw off, and with great sorrow he was compelled to leave the profession for which he was finely equipped by nature and education. He had an ardent temperament.

"His was the tropic climate of the heart—
All dazzling sunshine or a thunder storm."

He was a proof reader in Cambridge, Mass., until his eyesight failed. Then he kept a family boarding school at Atkinson, N. H., and taught for a while the grammar school in Ipswich, Mass. Removed to Lowell, Mass., and for twenty years was a deacon in the John Street Congregational church. He married Oct. 10, 1837, Harriet H. Webster of Bradford, Mass., who had been a teacher in Bradford Academy. She was well educated and very successful in her profession.

He was educated at Dummer Academy and Middlebury College, and from the latter received the degree of A. M. He spent one year at Andover Theological Seminary. While still a young man he passed three years on the ocean, visiting the Azores, Cape Verde Islands, St. Helena, Cape Town, Madagascar, Pernambuca, and the Faulkland Islands. His experiences were embodied in public lectures. He spent ten years working for the temperance cause, as editor of the Middlesex Washingtonian in Lowell, Mass., and the Massachusetts Temperance Standard in Boston, and by lecturing in most of the towns in Massachusetts, and in many in New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Canada. He was a teacher in the Central grammar school in Woburn, in Williams Academy at Stockbridge, and was for fourteen years an officer in the custom house at Boston. He was an accomplished writer and an eloquent speaker. His temperament was ardent, his energy great, and his imagination vivid. In every place in which he lived he had the highest reputation for his moral and religious character.

1260 Augustus Phillips Kimball[7] (David T.[6], Daniel[5], Nathaniel[4], Jonathan[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Ipswich, Mass., Sept. 9, 1812. For several years he was a member of the firm of Clark, White & Kimball of Boston, Mass., commission merchants. In 1841 he was of the firm of Kimball & Coburn. In 1843 he left this firm and bought the Androscoggin Mills in Brunswick, Me., where he engaged in manufacturing. In consequence of continued ill health he was forced to give up his business, and he spent the last years of his life in Ipswich, engaged in agricultural and horticultural pursuits. He aided many young men during the time in which he was engaged in active business.

1261 Elizabeth Kimball[7] (David Tenney[6], Daniel[5], Nathaniel[4], Jonathan[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Ipswich, Mass., July 9, 1814; married Aug. 8, 1839, Eugene Frederick Winsor Gray, died Brooklyn, N. Y., April 6, 1871, son of Rev. Cyrus and Belinda A. Gray of Stafford, Conn. He was the editor and publisher of political papers in Lynn and Ipswich, Mass., Rahway, N. J., and Newburg, N. Y., which he conducted with fairness and ability. He was an earnest Episcopalian. Mrs. Gray has been a pronounced friend of every good work and an active worker in the cause of temperance and church work. She was graduated at Ipswich Female Seminary in 1832.

retired from business in 1866, with a competency. He was a man of great energy and perseverance, and his intrepid spirit enabled him to surmount many difficulties. He was ever ready with heart, voice, and hand to aid all works for the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, and the poor and miserable found in him a helper. He aided largely in founding the Congregational church in Lexington, Mass. His end was peace and his memory is blessed.

He was in business with his brother-in-law, Augustus Phillips Kimball, in Boston and Brunswick, Me. He was a man of fine abilities and pure and upright character. She married 2d, Jan. 27, 1869, Rev. John Quincy Peabody of Ipswich, Mass., born July 28, 1825, graduated at Amherst College in 1848, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1852. He was ordained at Fryeburg, Me., Dec. 17, 1856, and resigned on account of failing health, July, 1859. She was graduated at the Female Seminary in Ipswich, Mass., in 1839. Her life has been largely one of self sacrifice and devotion to others. To many has she ministered as they drew near the shore of the eternal sea, heard their last words, and closed forever eyes which had never looked upon her but in love. She did these acts of love with a devotion which merits a reward above all human praise.

1308 John Shackford Kimball[7] (David[6], Michael[5], Edmund[4], Samuel[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Pembroke, N. H., April 28, 1812; died Boston, Mass., April 19, 1888; married Oct. 15, 1843, Mary Elbridge Stevens, born Jan. 16, 1818. His early education was obtained at New Hampton Academy. While a student there he became one of the founders of the "Social Fraternity Library." After leaving the academy he was employed for some time in a bakery at Concord, N. H. He left this place to enter the printing office of Hill and Sherburn at Concord, where he learned book and job work. He was afterwards in the office of Hill and Barton. He became noted as a card printer, and introduced enamelled work. He afterwards spent some time in the Franklin Book Store at Concord, leaving there to enter the postoffice at Portland, Me., where he spent three years. While in Portland he commenced the study of law with Mr. Haynes, who was district attorney for Cumberland Co. He continued his studies in the Harvard Law School at Cambridge, Mass., and finished his preparatory course in the office of Robert Rantoul of Boston, who was celebrated as a lawyer. After his admission to the bar he was for six years in partnership with Mr. Rantoul. On account of the failure of his health he was compelled to abandon the practice of the law. About the year 1838 he became a partner in the firm of Kimball and Chase of Burlington, Iowa, succeeding to the interest of his brother, Joseph L. Kimball. About 1840 Mr. Chase died and Samuel B. Wright, Mr. Kimball's brother-in-law, who had married Mary Lewis Kimball, entered the firm, the firm name being changed to J. S. Kimball & Co. This firm became noted as wholesale dealers in dry goods and groceries, both in the East and West, doing the largest business of any concern of its class in its section of the country. Mr. Kimball became known as one of the most skillful buyers in the trade. In 1865 he retired from active business, disposing of his interest to William Bell of Salt Lake City, Utah. The business was continued under the firm name of Wright, Bell, Chamberlin & Co. He resided in Boston, Mass., till about 1854. He then purchased an estate in Hopkinton, N. H., where he became a legal resident. He represented Hopkinton in the state legislature in 1866 and 1867. Gov. Walter Harriman appointed him colonel on his staff, which position he accepted and filled during the governor's term of office.

H. He went in early life to North Bridgewater, Mass., and entered the employment of the firm of Howard & Clark, manufacturers of furniture, first as boy in the factory, then as a journeyman, and finally he became a member of the firm. He was noted for his pleasant, genial manners. His business was not confined to furniture alone, for as his business prospered he invested largely in real estate and owned many houses. He was generally regarded as a sharp business man, yet many a tenant lived in his house long without paying rent. He was one of the kindest and most considerate of landlords, and scores have been indebted to him for a home. When he came to North Bridgewater it was a new town of less than two hundred inhabitants. He lived to see it grow into the flourishing city of Brockton, with more than 33,000 inhabitants, and he could say that he had done more than the average citizen to bring about this change. He did not care for political position, but he was a member of the board of health for eleven years. For the last few years of his life he did but little business except to care for his large property. He was an earnest member of the New Jerusalem church, and contributed liberally to its support.

H., March 10, 1892; married Oct., 1841, Sarah M. Cate, born Sept. 12, 1818, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Sanborn) Cate of Sanbornton, N. H. The part of Goffstown in which he was born is now within the limits of West Manchester. He remained on the farm where he was born until the age of fifteen, when he became clerk for his brother in the village store. When he was nineteen he became an equal partner in the store. A year later he was appointed postmaster by President Van Buren. Not long after, his brother Richard having died, he disposed of his interest in the store and went to Boston to study the art of miniature portrait painting on ivory, and afterwards went to Sanbornton and entered the academy. Later he successfully pursued his art of portrait painting in Manchester, Lowell, and Philadelphia. In 1842, in company with Joseph Kidder, he established the Manchester Democrat, a weekly paper at Manchester, N. H. He continued on the paper until 1844, when it was sold, and he engaged in daguerreotyping, having rooms at first in Manchester and Concord. He was one of the first to engage in this business. He established himself permanently in Concord with his brother, Joseph L. Kimball, doing a large and successful business. Feeling the need of more out of door life, he removed to Franklin and engaged in farming. He returned to Concord in 1861 and lived there until his death. In 1867 he was chosen state librarian by the trustees, and with the exception of one year held this position until he resigned it on account of failing health in 1890. Under his management the library became one of the best of its kind in the country. While in Manchester he assisted in organizing the Universalist society in that place. He has been a contributor to many papers and periodicals, generally on subjects of a philosophical nature, relating to social science. He was elected a member of the Chicago Historical Society in 1876.

He was a clerk in the drug store of William Norwood in Portsmouth from 1822 to 1824, and upon Mr. Norwood's death in 1824, he purchased the business and continued it until 1880, when he retired. He attended closely to business, was strictly honest and upright, and was eminently successful. He was treasurer of the Portsmouth Gas Light Co. from 1851 until his death. He was a strong anti-slavery man, from the commencement to the close of the slavery controversy. He was an earnest member of the Congregational church, and was greatly esteemed by his fellow citizens.

CHILDREN.

i. Charles Woodward[9], b. Nov. 22, 1829; d. Matamoras, Mex., Sept., 1866.

2225 ii. Lucy Woodward[9], b. Aug. 16, 1832.

iii. Harriet McEwen[9], b. Nov. 2, 1834. She has always lived in the old homestead where she was born. As a child she was not strong and was therefore chiefly educated at home by her mother, who was a lady of unusual attainments. Her father was a gentleman of the old school, a man of great refinement of thought and feeling, and of strong musical tastes, being one of the leaders in the Handel and Haydn society. In the midst of these surroundings the practical and poetical nature of the daughter was developed. She is a thorough housekeeper, but she has found the time to devote to good works in the church, which she ardently loves. She has taken great interest in the Cottage hospital of her native city, and in recognition of her services the directors on July 1, 1895, voted, "That the western wing of the new building be named the 'Harriet McEwen Kimball Pavilion,' as a slight recognition of her faithful and untiring labors in behalf of the institution from its first inception." Literature has been her pastime rather than her regular work, and she has therefore been able to devote her best energies to whatever has come from her pen. She has published three volumes of poems. In 1889 a full and complete edition of these was published which was very favorably noticed by the London Athenaeum. Dr. A. P. Peabody, Bishop Huntingdon, Mr. Stedman, and others have assigned her a high position among the writers of devotional poetry. She is an exceedingly interesting person. She has avoided as far as possible any publicity, but in her church and neighborhood she is known and valued for her unselfish devotion to the interests of suffering humanity, and she has many warm friends.

1469 Jason Jones Kimball[8] (Levi[7], Moses[6], Moses[5], Richard[4], John[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born in Windham, Vt., March 2, 1829; died Manchester, N. H., Sept. 27, 1895; married June 1, 1864, Celia B. Mann, born South Deerfield, Mass., 1830, daughter of Pliny and Achsah (Billings) Mann, and a relative of Horace Mann, the educator. She survives him. Both his parents were musical, and he early manifested a decided talent for his chosen profession. So proficient did he become in youth that at the age of sixteen he led a chorus of thirty-five voices, in which were six members of his own family. In 1856 he went to Boston and pursued his vocal studies under B. F. Baker, Mme. Frazer, and Myron W. Whitney, receiving instruction also from the best masters in harmony, John K. Paine, O. B. Brown, and Kellar. During his long stay in Boston he became prominent as a bass soloist of pronounced ability and a director of musical societies. The musical atmosphere in which he lived well fitted him for his future work. Coming to Manchester in 1872, he devoted the rest of his life to upbuilding and improving music in the city, and in this noble work no one has accomplished more than he. For twenty-three years he had charge of the musical instruction in the public schools of Manchester, and many of the leading singers of the city were numbered among his private pupils. His work in the schools was successful in the highest degree, and hundreds are indebted to him for all they ever learned of music. His rare ability as a musical director was demonstrated in May, 1895, at the opening concert of the Philharmonic Society, when the public had the opportunity of listening to the excellent work of a chorus of six hundred voices from the higher grades of the Manchester schools under his leadership. Throughout New Hampshire and adjoining states he was well known as a soloist, and he is still remembered in Boston for the prominent part he took in the famous concerts of the Handel and Haydn society. His death occurred suddenly at his home on the evening of Sept. 27, 1895. There had been a rehearsal of the Unitarian choir, of which he was a member and leader, and after the singers had gone home, he was playing on an old Cremona violin which his brother had brought from Washington, and Mrs. C. E. Burnham was accompanying him on the piano. They had reached the last bar of the selection, Raff's Cavatina, which he played with the most beautiful expression, when he suddenly made a discord. Without looking up, the accompanist said: "Don't stop!" But it was Death's hand that made the discord, and the player, falling to the floor, expired before the echoes of his music had died away. Death was due to heart disease, from which deceased had suffered his first attack a few days previously. Possessed of a social, genial temperament, he had the faculty of making friends and holding them, and his memory is cherished in loving regard by thousands, young and old. He was a member of the Masonic Order, thirty-second degree, Scottish Rite, of DeMolay Commandery, K. T., of Boston, and of the Mystic Shrine. No children.

1526 Samuel Hunter Kimball[8] (John[7], Samuel[6], Ebenezer[5], Ebenezer[4], Samuel[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born in Richfield, N. Y., Nov. 4, 1811; died April 12, 1868; married June 12, 1845, Sarah Maria Stage, born Stafford, Genesee Co., N. Y., died Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 17, 1895. He was educated for the bar, and started for St. Louis in 1836 to practise his profession, but after reaching Jackson, Mich., he was persuaded by his friends to remain there. He practised law for some years with success, his ability being recognized in that vicinity. About 1851 or 1852 he was afflicted with bronchitis, and acting upon the advice of his physicians gave up his profession. He then devoted himself to developing the Jackson iron mine near Marquette, Mich., in which he had an interest. He lived a few years at Detroit, then two years at Erie, Pa., and finally in 1858 made his headquarters at Cleveland, Ohio. He was president of the Jackson mine for several years, and invested largely in smelting furnaces near Youngstown, Ohio, and in the Mahoning Valley. In 1863 he was injured in a railway collision, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. He left at his death a large estate. He was a man of scholarly attainments, devoted to scientific research, quiet in manner, resolute of purpose, of unswerving integrity; a man who won universal respect; his friends, though not numerous for one so widely known, when once made were held by the beauty, strength, and purity of his character. His wife and family remained at the homestead in Cleveland after his death. She was a woman full of energy and enthusiasm, which kept her young in heart and spirit in spite of the weight of years. She was one of the foremost promoters of art in the city, giving liberally of her wealth to this and other semi-public interests. She was the founder of the Western Reserve School of Design. In founding this she carried out the idea of her husband, whose wish it was to found a school where young women could become self supporting through the applied arts. She was a woman of strong personality, so attractive in appearance, and so full of sympathy and cheerful helpfulness, that few were more widely known or more beloved in the city where she made her home.

Farley, born Chelsea, Mass., July 30, 1851, died Washington, D. C., May 25, 1886, daughter of Gustavus and Amelia Frederika (Newman) Farley of Cambridge, Mass. He was graduated at the Salem High School in 1854, and immediately entered the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard University, where he spent a year. He then went to Germany and continued his studies. Several months were spent in Gottingen, after which he matriculated at the University of Frederick Wilhelm at Berlin, where he remained until 1857. He received the degrees of A. M. and Ph. D. from the University of George Augusta. He then entered on a practical course in mining engineering and metallurgy. The summer of 1858 was spent in Paris. In 1859 and 1860 he was employed as assistant on the geological survey of the upper Mississippi lead region, in parts of Wisconsin and Illinois. In 1865 he was professor of chemistry and economic geology in the State Agricultural College at Ovid, N. Y., and was engaged there when the war broke out. The president of the college, Gen. Mariesna R. Patrick, a military man by education and experience, took the field as brigadier general. Dr. Kimball joined him at Upton Hill, Va., April 2, 1862, and received a commission from President Lincoln dated April 18, 1862, as assistant adjutant-general of volunteers. As chief of brigade staff he participated in numerous battles, including those of Gainesville, Groveton, Chantilly, South Mountain, and Antietam. After the latter battle Gen. Patrick was appointed provost marshal general "of the armies operating against Richmond," and Capt. Kimball was transferred with the general officer to the staff of the commanding general. He served on the staffs of Generals McClellan, Burnside, Hooker, and Meade, and took part in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg. Suffering from ill health he resigned his commission in Dec., 1863. On March 23, 1865, the rank of major was conferred upon him "for gallant and meritorious services." He resumed the practice of his profession in New York city. In 1874 he accepted an honorary chair in geology in Lehigh University at South Bethlehem, Pa., while continuing his professional work in New York city. For twelve years he resided at Lehigh University. On Jan. 28, 1886, President Cleveland appointed him director of the mint of the United States, a position that he held for over four years and resigned Oct. 15, 1889. He has resided since in Washington, D. C. He is the author of numerous scientific memoirs in the American Journal of Science, in the proceedings of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, and other scientific periodicals. He is connected with various scientific societies in the United States and in Europe.

1587 Sumner Increase Kimball[8] (Increase S.[7], Nathaniel[6], Richard[5], Ezra[4], Ephraim[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born in Lebanon, Me., Sept. 2, 1834; married Oct. 12, 1858, Ellen Frothingham Fenno, born Dec. 5, 1835, daughter of Edward and Elizabeth (Frothingham) Fenno of Augusta, Me. He was graduated A. B., Dartmouth, 1855, S. D., Bowdoin, 1891. He studied law with his father, was admitted to the bar in 1858, and began practice at North Berwick, Me. In 1859 he sat in the legislature, and, though the youngest member, took an active part in the proceedings, serving on the committee on the judiciary. In January, 1861, he entered the treasury department at Washington as a clerk. He rose to the position of chief clerk in the second auditor's office. In 1871 he was placed in charge of the revenue marine service, which he reorganized and reformed, greatly reducing the expense of maintenance while increasing its efficiency more than five-fold. While retaining this post, he acted, during the secretaryship of Lot M. Morrill, in 1876–'77, as chief clerk of the treasury department, after twice declining a regular appointment to that office. When he was made chief of the revenue marine division there were several buildings on the coast of New Jersey and Long Island in which were stored surf boats and simple appliances for the use of fishermen and wreckers in the rescue of shipwrecked persons. The keepers of these stations were scarcely more than mere custodians of the government property, and had generally been appointed on political grounds. During the winter of 1870–'71 several fatal disasters occurred on these coasts, and when he assumed office he made a tour of inspection and found that the stations were in a dilapidated condition, the keepers negligent and incapable, and the whole service inefficient. Congress appropriated $200,000 for fitting out and manning the stations, and the service was reorganized by Mr. Kimball so thoroughly that during the following winter every person who was emperilled by shipwreck on those coasts was rescued. The number of stations was increased, life-saving crews and modern appliances were provided for all of them, the incapable keepers were supplanted by expert surfmen, without regard to politics, and the patrol system for watching the entire coast was introduced. The success of the life-saving service during the first year caused it to be extended in 1872 to Cape Cod, and afterwards to other parts of the Atlantic coast. In 1878 the life-saving service was organized as a separate bureau, with Mr. Kimball as its head, and stations were established on the Pacific coast and on the great lakes. He is still at the head of this service, with his office in Washington, where he resides.

of the new machine and car shop of the Concord R. R. at Concord, N. H., and in 1850 was made master mechanic, a position that he held for eight years. In 1856 he was elected to the common council of the city of Concord, was re-elected in 1857 and was chosen president of the council. He was a member of the house of representatives of New Hampshire in 1858 and again in 1859. From 1859 to 1862 he was city marshal and collector of taxes for the city of Concord. In 1862 President Lincoln appointed him collector of internal revenue for the second district of New Hampshire, which position he held for seven years, collecting and paying over to the treasurer of the United States nearly seven millions of dollars. He was elected mayor of Concord in 1872–'73–'74–'75. During this time the system of water supply from Long Pond was successfully completed. He was elected one of the water commissioners and was president of the board. During his administration one wooden and two iron bridges were built across the rivers in the city, and the fire department was provided with new buildings and apparatus. In 1876 he was a member of the convention to revise the constitution of the state. In 1877 he was one of the three commissioners appointed by the governor to erect the new state prison. In 1880 he was elected president of the Concord Gas Light Co. In 1880 he was appointed by the supreme court of the state one of the three trustees of the Manchester and Keene R. R. In November, 1880, he was elected to the state senate, and on the organization of the senate in 1881 he was elected its president. He has been treasurer of the Merrimack County Savings Bank for many years; a director in the Mechanicks National Bank and the Republican Press Association, and treasurer of the New Hampshire Bible Society and the New Hampshire Orphans' Home; president of the Centennial Home for the Aged and New Hampshire Odd Fellows' Home. The degree of A. M. was conferred on him by Dartmouth College in 1882. In person he is tall and erect and of commanding presence. His modes of life are regular and he is a total abstainer through conviction and habit. While firm and decided in his views he is genial and courteous in personal intercourse. He is a careful reader with an inclination for historical and genealogical research. He has taken great interest in the history of his family, and at the cost of much time and labor compiled and published the history of the descendants of Joseph Kimball, his great grandfather. We are indebted to his researches for much information in regard to this branch of the family. He resides in Concord, N. H.

1600 Benjamin Ames Kimball[8] (Benjamin[7], John[6], Joseph[5], John[4], Caleb[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born in Boscawen, Aug. 22, 1833; married Jan. 19, 1861, Myra Tilton Elliott, daughter of Ira and Rhoda (Ames) Elliott of Sanbornton, N. H. He was graduated with honors from the Chandler Scientific School of Dartmouth College in July, 1854, receiving the degree of B. S. In Aug., 1854, he entered the service of the Concord R. R. as draftsman, and was promoted in April, 1856, to be foreman of the locomotive department. On the first of Jan., 1858, he succeeded his brother John as master mechanic, a position which he held until April 1, 1865, when he resigned to become a member of the firm of Ford and Kimball, manufacturers of car wheels and brass and iron founders. He long carried on this business successfully. In 1870 he was elected a member of the house of representatives, and declined a reëlection in 1871. He was appointed in 1870 a member of a special committee appointed by the city council of Concord to procure plans for an aqueduct from Long Pond for the water supply of the city. In 1872 he was appointed a member of the water commissioners to construct the works upon the plans submitted by the committee. He was in the board for six years, and was its president for three years. In 1876 he was a member of the constitutional convention. He was president and trustee of the Concord Savings Bank, trustee of the Merrimack County Savings Bank, and director of the Mechanicks National Bank from its organization and is now its president. He was elected a director of the Concord R. R. in Jan., 1879. He has been very prominent in the affairs of the road, and had great influence

At the age of fifteen he entered the Lawrence, Mass., locomotive works as an apprentice, and worked there until he had acquired the trade of a machinist. He then attended a private school at Derry, N. H., and the academy at Andover, Mass., in order to fit himself for the Troy Polytechnic Institute, where he studied engineering and drawing. He afterwards entered the repair shops of the Concord R. R. at Concord, N. H. Having thus become familiar with the locomotive he removed to Rochester, N. Y. At the outbreak of the war he received an appointment as master mechanic in the United States navy, and was in the South Atlantic blockading squadron under Admiral

A. J. Kimball.

Atlantic Publishing & Engraving Co. N.Y.

Dupont at Port Royal, S. C. Here he was specially detailed to repair the machinery of gunboats and transports, having in charge two old Nantucket whalers which had been fitted up with machinery, and on which a force of one hundred mechanics was employed. His services at this repair station were of great value, and he was personally complimented by Admiral Dupont for his good work. In June, 1863, he resigned his position in the navy and returned to Rochester and engaged in the tobacco manufacturing business, entering into partnership with Henry Suggett, whose business, established in 1846, had grown from a small beginning to proportions requiring more capital and the activity, energy, and mechanical experience of a young, wide-awake man. The business was conducted under the title of Suggett & Kimball until 1867, when Mr. Suggett retired and Mrs. Keeler, Mr. Kimball's mother-in-law, was admitted in his place. Three years later James C. Hart joined the firm. Mr. Kimball was president of the Post Express Printing Co., a trustee of the Rochester Savings Bank, president of the Union Bank, president of the City Hospital, president of the Industrial School, vice-president of the Security Trust Co., vice-president of the American Tobacco Co., director in the Rochester Railway Co., director in the Toronto and Hamilton and Buffalo Railroad Co., and vice-president of the Lyceum Theatre Co. Of marked originality and unquestioned resources of mind and capable of great physical and mental application, he was likewise intensely practical.

1680 Robert Jackson Kimball[8] (Hiram[7], Richard[6], John[5], Richard[4], Richard[3], John[2], Richard[1]) born in Randolph, Vt., Feb. 6, 1836; married Dec. 17, 1863, Martha Lauretta Morse, born Norwalk, Ohio, Aug. 5, 1842, daughter of Charles Aldro and Lauretta Cooley Smith Morse. Charles A. Morse was the son of Zebediah Morse, and the grandson of Zebediah Morse of Stockbridge, Mass. Mr. Kimball was educated in the common schools and at the West Randolph Academy. At the early age of thirteen he commenced business as a newsboy on the old Vermont Central railroad. He was one of the early telegraph operators for the old Vermont & Boston Telegraph Company, within about six years of the time when the first telegraph message was sent; then an expressman in connection with the railroad business, and has been largely interested in telegraphs and railroads ever since. He engaged in the banking business in Toronto, Canada, in 1862. In 1864 he was appointed United States consul at Toronto, and served at a time when that was headquarters for many prominent Southern refugees who were endeavoring to carry on operations in the interests of the Confederacy against the United States. He was the means of communicating important information to the government in regard to the manufacturing of cannon and fitting out of hostile expeditions on Lake Erie, etc., etc., an account of which is published in the diplomatic correspondence of the department of state at Washington, in 1864. On the evening of November 25, 1864, a gang of eight Confederates, led by one Captain Robert Cobb

ROBERT J. KIMBALL.

Kennedy, set fire to ten crowded hotels and Barnum's Museum, in New York city, attempting to destroy as much of the city as possible, regardless of the sacrifice of human life. Fortunately the fires were discovered, and they failed in their purpose and fled to Canada. In his official duties as consul he met Kennedy, recognized him by a photograph, notified the authorities, so that when he returned to the United States he was captured, taken to Fort Lafayette in New York harbor, tried for violating the rules of war and acting as a spy, was convicted, and hanged on the twenty-fifth of March, 1865. The newspapers of the day characterized Kennedy as the most notorious prisoner confined in the fort during the war. He established his banking business in New York in 1865, where it still continues as R. J. Kimball & Co. In 1872, owing to a great decline in securities in a panic, he was unable to meet his payments and suspended. He settled with his creditors within forty-eight hours after his failure by the payment of twenty-five cents on the dollar, and received a discharge from any further obligation. In 1881 he paid the other seventy-five per cent., together with nine years' interest at six per cent., the whole amounting to many thousands of dollars. He has maintained a home in West Randolph since his father died in 1865, and in 1887 he built his residence known as Montague Place, and resumed his citizenship in the state. He was aide-de-camp on Governor Dillingham's staff, 1888–1890, represented the town of Randolph in the legislature, 1890–'91, and served on the committees of ways and means, banks, and special joint committee on the World's Columbian Exposition. He was appointed by Governor Fuller delegate representing the state to the bankers' congress at Chicago, 1893. He is trustee of the state normal school. While he has for many years been a member of the Baptist church, his liberal support to the cause has not been confined to that denomination. He has shown his generosity and public spirit in many ways in the different enterprises in his native town. He also has a home in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he has resided since 1868. He is connected with several of the charitable and other important public institutions of that city, among which are the following: A trustee of the Emmanual Baptist church for many years, a life member of the Young Men's Christian Association, a life member and trustee in the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, a director in the Brooklyn Art Association, a director in the Hamilton Club, a trustee in the People's Trust Company. He has been a member of the New York Stock Exchange since 1867, a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, and a member of the Chicago Stock Exchange. He was instrumental in forming the Brooklyn Society of Vermonters, of which he was the first secretary, and afterwards president. He is a member of the Vermont State Societies of the Sons of the American Revolution, and of the Colonial Wars.

She was the daughter of Asher and Joanna Ames Palmer. She was an affectionate and kind wife and mother, a devout and consistent member and regular attendant of the Jewett City Baptist church. He married 2d, April 20, 1869, Althea T. Green of Griswold. She is still living. At the age of nineteen he went to sea, making a whaling voyage from New London to the Pacific ocean. He followed the sea for thirteen years in the merchant service mostly between New York and Boston and the West Indies. In 1853 he owned the brig Champion which was lost with all on board on a voyage from Norfolk, Va., laden with corn, near Point Judith. After the loss of this vessel, in which nearly the whole of his property was invested, he settled on a farm in Griswold near his birthplace. Here he has continued to live until the present time. He attends regularly and has long contributed to the support of the Jewett City Baptist church. He takes an active interest in town affairs and has many times been elected to offices of honor and trust in the town. At the age of seventy-two he still takes as keen an interest as ever in the management of his own business and town affairs, and shows the same good judgment and insight for which he has long been noted.

1764 Richard Bradbury Kimball[8](Abraham L.[7],Joshua[6],John[5], Joshua[4],Joseph[3],John[2],Richard[1]) born in Buxton, Me., Jan. 15, 1825; died Jan. 22, 1865. He went to La Crosse in 1852, and for several years was superintendent of lumber camps on the North river. In 1861 he went to the war as sergeant of the First Wisconsin Volunteer Battery of Light Artillery. His skill as a gunner was remarkable, and he was excelled by none. He was engaged in some twenty battles including the assault and capture of Vicksburg and Jackson, Miss., and was in many forced marches. He reënlisted in 1864 in the Veterans' Corps, and was sent to Brashear City on the Gulf of Mexico, and remained in that vicinity until the surrender of Lee and the close of the war. He was six feet three inches in height and weighed two hundred and ten pounds, but the malaria, exposure, and fatiguing marches broke him down, and when brought home by way of New York he was carried by kind comrades from the ship to the cars and weighed less than one hundred pounds. He died at the home of his brother-in-law, Penuel Clark.

1765 Charles Bradbury Kimball[8](Abraham L.[7],Joshua[6],John[5], Joshua[4],Joseph[3],John[2],Richard[1]) born in Howland, Me., March 31, 1831; died Oakland, Cal., July 3, 1896; married Aug. 27, 1863, Mary Ann Clough, born Mexico, N. Y., Jan. 8, 1841, daughter of Col. S. D. Clough of Racine, Wis. He attended Lawrence University in Wisconsin. His father was one of those who persuaded Mr. Lawrence to found the university, and held a scholarship in it. On June 6, 1861, he enlisted at La Crosse, Wis., in the First Wisconsin Battery, was elected orderly sergeant on Oct. 14, 1861, was commissioned as second lieutenant. He took part in the capture of Cumberland Gap, and was in the battles of Cracker's Neck, Ky., Charleston, W. Va., Grand Gulf, Port Gibson, Champion Hills, Raymond, Big Black River Bridge, the siege of Vicksburg, and other engagements. By a railroad accident in Dec., 1862, his right ankle was crushed, making him a cripple for life. He rejoined his command on crutches, and in time resumed his duty and was made first lieutenant. He commanded the battery in seven battles. At the commencement of the siege of Vicksburg he was appointed ordnance officer of General Osterhaus' division, and afterwards ordnance officer of the Thirteenth Army Corps commanded by General McClernand, serving in this position through the siege of Vicksburg. He was tendered the command of a regiment, but his crippled condition compelled him to decline it, and for the same reason he resigned his commission in the army Aug. 14, 1863, and retired from the service. He engaged in business until 1866, when he removed to Racine, Wis., where he was a contractor and builder. He staid there until 1875, when he removed to California. He resided in Oakland, Cal., and was a member of Lyon Post, G. A. R. He followed the business of a builder and contractor.

W. W. Kimball

daughter of Hon. E. A. Converse of Staffordville, Conn. Mr. Converse was a man of very high character, whose business life spanned nearly half a century. Mr. Kimball was graduated at the Ellington Academy in 1848. He continued his studies in the classical department of the Williston Academy at Easthampton, Mass. After leaving this place he was appointed assistant principal at Ellington, Conn., Academy, a position that he resigned in order to take charge of the High school in the Greenville district of Norwich, Conn. He retained this position for three years. In both of these places the proficiency of his classes, especially in mathematics, attracted the attention of educators. He was noted for the skill with which he maintained order and discipline without apparent effort and with rare display of authority. He resigned his position in Greenville to become the principal of the Webster school in New Haven, where the corps of teachers under him numbered from twelve to fourteen. After remaining here for three years, although the work had many attractions for him, he decided that a career having broader relations with the world presented greater opportunities both for pleasure and profit. He accordingly resigned in 1860, and after a year spent in travel took up the permanent business of his life. In 1863 he went to Hartford and accepted the New England department of the Insurance Co. of North America, embracing all of New England except Boston. This company was established at Philadelphia in 1792, and is the oldest and, with a single exception, the largest, fire insurance company in the United States. For thirty years the relationship has continued without a ripple, to the eminent satisfaction of all parties. Considering the vicissitudes of the business, it is remarkable that the books of the office show a net profit for each year of that long term. In 1866 the Hartford Life and Annuity Insurance Co. began operations on a capital of $300,000, and at the end of twelve months found that about one third of that sum had been swallowed up in an experiment. Visions of bankruptcy alarmed the stockholders. Meanwhile the value of the shares had fallen one half, and some of the owners took steps preliminary to winding up the venture. At this juncture Mr. Kimball, after repeated solicitations from the directors, consented to accept the presidency. He at once radically revised its aims and methods, infusing such vitality into its management that within three years the impairment of capital was made good from the business, and the company established on a dividend-paying basis. Having learned by observation what could be accomplished on the somewhat novel plans of the association, other parties quietly bought a controlling interest in the property for the purpose of handling it. As often happens in such cases, the promoters of the scheme failed to win the success which had allured them, though later the enterprise became solidly established. Mr. Kimball has for many years been constantly solicited to take part in the organization and management of new enterprises. Although compelled in many cases to decline, he has found time to aid in the establishment of several successful industrial and financial institutions. He was one of the corporators and has been from the beginning a director in the Security Company and in the Loan and Guarantee Company. He is a director in the Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company. In association with William A. Healey he became a shareholder in what is now the Pratt & Cady Company, in its early days, and as director has been identified with its remarkable growth. In 1884 he accepted the presidency of the Smyth Manufacturing Company, which has developed the patents and manufactures the only American machine for sewing books with thread. From small beginnings, and in the face of many obstacles, the machine has been gradually introduced into many leading binderies in all parts of the world. Even Russia has several in operation, and a number have found their way to Australia. The mechanism so combines simplicity with ingenuity, and is covered by so many patents, that it is not likely to have a rival for a long time to come. Mr. Kimball has always refused to be a candidate for political offices, but his deep interest in education has led him to take an active part in the management of his local school district, and he has served as a member of the board of school visitors of the town. On the formation of the Hartford board of trade, in 1888, he was elected first vice-president, and has been annually re-elected since. An intimate knowledge of mechanical principles, skill in detecting the vital excellences and defects of mechanical contrivances, and a broad acquaintance with practical affairs, have made his services in this position particularly valuable to the association and to the public. His sons are both graduates of Yale College and live in Hartford, Conn.

C. P. Kimball,

March 20, 1828, died, April 8, 1871, daughter of Hon. William Porter, of Turner, Me. She was a lady of great loveliness and rare excellence of character. He married, 2d, Helen A. (Getchell) Sparhawk, of Chicago, Ill., born Jan. 31, 1848, who survived him, and lives in New York city. She was the daughter of Henry F. Getchell, formerly of Anson, Me. He learned the trade of carriage smith with his brother, J. M. Kimball, at Bridgton, Me., and when twenty-one years old he established a carriage manufactory at Bridgton. His force of character, the marked resources of his mechanical genius, and his great business capacity were quickly apparent. No detail of his business was too trifling to receive his attention, and he overcame all obstacles. His success was remarkable, and the works were so quickly and largely increased that scores of people were in his employ, and the liveliest and most prosperous days of that town were when this carriage works was in full operation. The growth of the business demanded increased facilities, and in 1854, he moved to Portland, Me., and soon had two large carriage manufactories in successful operation. He was at that time a member of Kimball Bros., in Boston, Mass. He had great originality and skill as a carriage designer, which secured originality and excellence in his work, and has given him a world-wide reputation. His extensive business was remunerative to a high degree, but did not change the simplicity of his deportment or the unassuming plainness of his mode of life. He was surveyor of the port of Portland and Falmouth, and was an alderman of Portland in 1860 and 1861. He was an earnest war Democrat, and in the latter year was very active in securing aid to the families of those who were fighting for their country. In 1869, he presided over the Maine Democratic State convention, was nominated for governor, and declined the nomination. He was again nominated by the Democrats in 1871 and 1872, and failed of an election. He was an active member of the Maine Charitable Association, and was its president until he left Portland. In 1876, he was appointed a commissioner from Maine to the Centennial, but resigned the position. He removed from Portland, in 1876, and entered the employ of Brewster & Co., of New York city, the largest carriage establishment in the United States. He was immediately appointed by Gov. Tilden of New York, a commissioner to the Centennial and was one of the executive committee in charge of that fair. Later he removed to Chicago, Ill., and built up a large manufacturing business, now a stock company, known as the C. P. Kimball Company, which is managed by his son, Fred Kimball. He was appointed, by President Cleveland, United States consul to Stuttgart, Germany, where he remained two years, when he was compelled to resign on account of poor health. His management of the consulate was completely satisfactory to the government.

1816 Hannibal Ingalls Kimball[8] (Peter[7], Peter[6], Francis[5], Joseph[4], Richard[3], Thomas[2], Richard[1]) born in Woodstock, Me., May 16, 1832; died at the house of his brother, Edwin N. Kimball, Brookline, Mass., April 27, 1895; married Aug. 30, 1853, Rosalie Denison Brown, born Nov. 19, 1831, died March 11, 1857, daughter of Titus Olcutt Brown of Norway, Me.; married 2d, Sept. 26, 1858, Mary Cooke, born Oct. 17, 1839, daughter of George Cooke and granddaughter of Leander Cooke of New Haven, Conn. When young he lived with Hannibal Ingalls of Mercer, Me., whose wife was a sister of his mother. He afterwards worked for several years in his father's carriage shop, and became an expert manufacturer of carriages, having a strong natural aptitude for the business. His education was received in the public schools. He worked in the shop of his oldest brother at Bridgton, Me., and later was the foreman in the manufactory of his brother, Charles P. Kimball, at New Haven, Conn. He was at the head of this establishment, which turned out three thousand carriages a year. Every kind of vehicle that went on wheels, whether built for pleasure or business, was manufactured, and the factory became widely and favorably known. His health was impaired by close attention to business, and at the close of the war he travelled extensively in the South, having two objects in view, the restoration of his health, and the selection of a place for business. Atlanta, Ga., was chosen as one of the most favorable localities in the South, and results have justified the wisdom of his choice. He went to that city in 1866, and when Georgia decided to establish the seat of government in that city, he purchased the unfinished opera house, and under contract with the state he reconstructed it into a spacious, convenient, and substantial capitol. In 1870 he laid out, graded, and fitted up with walks and drives the Oglethorpe Park, now the pride of the city. There the state fairs have been held, and there was located the Cotton Exposition. In the same year he built the "H. I. Kimball House," an elegant and massive hotel costing $675,000. About the same time he constructed one hundred and fifty miles of railroad leading into the city of Atlanta. Three years later he organized a company, planned, erected, and put in successful operation a cotton factory of 24,000 spindles. Atlanta quickly became an important railway center, new lines were built, and old ones connected with the city. He became connected with many of them in an official way. He was the promoter and organizer of the Pullman car service in the South. When the great International Cotton Exposition was decided upon and Atlanta selected for the site, he was placed in charge as director-general, and largely through his executive ability it was brought to a successful issue. In the winter of 1881–'82, at the meeting of the American Agricultural Association in New York, he read a very valuable paper on the resources and condition of the Southern states, which was published in full in the proceedings. He was a republican in politics, a prohibitionist, and, with every member of his family, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. In the spring of 1893 he went to Chicago and took an active part in organizing the great Chicago Fair. In July he was elected president of the board of judges in the department of liberal arts. This office he conducted with his usual energy, attending to the duties faithfully until the close of the Fair in October. The position was one requiring much tact and firmness. Among many conflicting elements he always seemed to keep cool and good natured, with pleasant words for every one. It was my good fortune to be intimately connected with him during this term of service, and I ever found him earnest to find out the right course and to follow it.

He learned the trade of a carriage manufacturer in New Haven, Conn. He served in the Union army until he was discharged on account of ill health. He spent one year in Australia as agent of a London and New York shipping house, returning through Europe, thus going around the world, before he was twenty-five years of age. After some months spent in Central City, Colo., in mining, he went to Chicago, Ill., and was a superintendent for the Pullman Sleeping Car Co., for some years. He then went to Boston, Mass., and became a member of the firm of Kimball Bros. Later he went into business with his father-in-law, George Cook, as successors to the firm of Hallet & Davis, piano manufacturers. He lives in Brookline, Mass.

He early developed a decided taste for teaching. He taught at Harrison village from 1845 to 1850. He then went to New York and secured a position as teacher in a large boarding school near Tarrytown, N. Y. His father having died he returned to Maine in 1851 and spent two years in settling the estate. He then taught two years in the Mechanic's Institute on Chandler St., New York. He afterwards served two years as principal of School No. 14, in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was then elected as principal of Ward School No. 2, in Henry School, N. Y., where he superintended thirty teachers. He remained there eight years. In 1864, the school board of New York became Democratic, and he was removed from his position solely on political grounds. He served two terms as alderman in the city of Brooklyn, covering the whole period of the War of the Rebellion. After he was dismissed from his position as principal he immediately commenced business on Wall street, New York, as a stock and bond broker, and for twenty-five years did a successful business. For fourteen years the firm name was C. H. Kimball & Co., and since that time it has been Kimball, Howell & Co. For thirteen years he has been associated with the persons engaged in the development of the summer and winter resort at Lakewood, N. J., having been president of the Lakewood Hotel and Land Association since its organization in 1879.

1861 Timothy Chamberlin Kimball[8] (John Hazen[7], John[6], John[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Barton, Vt., April 26, 1829; died New York, Sept. 8, 1893; married Oct. 5, 1879, Mary Sophia Tompkins of New York city. His early life was spent in working on the farm and attending district school. Later he spent two terms in the academy at St. Johnsbury and two terms in the academy at Peacham, and kept district school one term in the town of Lyndon. He left home before he was twenty-one, and went to Boston to seek his fortune, and to make a name and a reputation for himself. He reached there with less than seven dollars, but he knew that a hard day's work meant a dollar, and he accepted the situation. After remaining in Boston about three years he removed to New York city, and engaged in the wholesale fruit trade, making the buying and selling of apples a specialty. Afterwards, as his business increased, he associated with him his brothers, Benjamin and Austin, and his cousin, Hazen. The operations of the house extended from west of the Missouri river to Nova Scotia, the sales reaching among the hundreds of thousands of barrels annually. So widely was he known, and so extensive was his business, that he was called the "Apple King" of the world. In 1889 he was elected president of the Gansevoort bank of the city of New York. He stood high as a good citizen, a man with many warm personal friends, thus demonstrating that industry, sagacity, integrity, and trust in God, with strong, persistent efforts, will lead to good results. He died after a brief illness, and is buried in Barton, Vt.

1862 John Kimball[8] (John H.[7], John[6], John[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Barton, Vt., Oct. 10, 1831; married Jan. 18, 1864, Annie M. Eskridge, daughter of Rev. Vernon and Sarah A. Eskridge of Portsmouth, Va. He was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1856, and at Union Theological Seminary, in New York city, in 1859. After a year in mission work in New York city he went by the overland stage to California, where he was pastor of the Congregational church in Grass Valley and the Second Congregational church in San Francisco until February, 1863, when he returned East and was in the service of the U. S. Christian Commission with the army until the autumn of 1864, at which time he was appointed U. S. chaplain in Carver Hospital, Washington, D. C. He was mustered out in July, 1865, and was immediately appointed on the staff of Generals C. H. and O. O. Howard, and was employed as superintendent of schools in the Freedmen's Bureau, with his office in Washington. He occupied this position until November, 1869. He then returned to California and spent the next ten years in the ministry at San Francisco and Oakland, making occasional trips East, preaching in Chicago, Ill., and Brooklyn, N. Y., and paying a visit to Europe in 1873. In 1878 he became one of the publishers and managing editor of The Pacific at San Francisco, the oldest paper in California, established in 1851, and the organ of the Congregational church on the Pacific coast.

ii. Mary Jennette Whitehill[9], b. Peacham, Vt., Nov. 9, 1862; m. May 25, 1887, Lewis A. Bigelow. Resides in Everett, Mass. She was educated at Peacham Academy and at Mt. Holyoke Seminary, South Hadley, Mass.

1865 Frederick Marius Kimball[8] (Frederick White[7], John[6], John[5], Benjamin[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Barton, Vt., June 14, 1840; married Sept. 27, 1863, Susanna S. Hoyt of Cabot, Vt., who is a lineal descendant of John Hoyt, who came from England and settled in Salisbury, Mass., about 1631. One of her ancestors was a Revolutionary soldier who carried his wounded captain off the battlefield. He was educated at Orleans Liberal Institute in Glover, Vt., where most of his boy-hood was spent. He taught school several winters, and commenced the study of law, but the war coming on he laid aside his books and took up the musket. With many other Glover boys, he enlisted in Co. D, Sixth Vt. Regt. This regiment was mustered into the service of the U. S. Oct. 15, 1861, at Montpelier, and immediately started for the seat of war. During the following winter the regiment was quartered at Camp Griffin, Va., and was brigaded with four other Vermont regiments. The brigade afterwards became famous as the "Old Vermont Brigade," making a record second to no other organization in the entire army. He participated in the battles of Lee's Mills, Williamsburg, Golding's Farm, Savage Station, White Oak Swamp, Malvern Hill, Harrison's Landing, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, first and second Fredericksburg, Maryland Heights, Bank's Ford, Gettysburg, and Funkstown, besides many other minor engagements and skirmishes. He was promoted through several grades, and from early in 1863 commanded his company in all of its subsequent battles while he remained with his regiment. He was wounded at Bank's Ford, May 4, 1863, and again very severely in the left thigh at Funkstown, Md., July 10, 1863. From the effects of this wound he never fully recovered. At Bank's Ford, when his regiment charged Early's assaulting columns, the enemy was thrown into great confusion by the unexpected attack, broke and ran, hotly pursued by the Sixth Vermont with fixed bayonets. His belt plate turned a minié ball and saved his life, but the glancing ball wounded him slightly in the arm. The regiment captured over four hundred prisoners in this charge. One Confederate captain, who had been shot through the face, surrendered his sword to Captain Kimball, together with a remnant of his company, who then threw down their muskets, and being placed in the charge of two or three privates, were ordered to the rear. Captain Kimball had only turned to go forward, when a rebel, who had surrendered, picked up a gun which was lying on the ground, and was in the very act of shooting him, when the movement was seen by Sergeant Cleveland of his company, who, with the quickness of thought, drew his gun upon the rebel and shot him dead. Thus was Captain Kimball's life twice almost miraculously saved during that one engagement. When wounded in the Battle of Funkstown, he remained in command of his company until his boot filled with blood. This fight was one of the hardest of the whole war for a small one. The Vermont brigade, a mile and a half from any support, deployed as skirmishers, repelled the attack made again and again by an entire Confederate division. At Antietam his haversack was carried away by a grapeshot, and several times his clothing was pierced by bullets. After being wounded at Funkstown he was never again able to perform field service, and was honorably discharged by order of the secretary of war, Oct. 22, 1863, but within a week thereafter he was commissioned by President Lincoln a second lieutenant in the Veteran Reserve Corps. From this time until the close of the war he performed post and garrison duties at various places, a portion of the time at Brattleboro and St. Albans, Vt. For meritorious conduct he received several promotions, again reaching the rank of captain. After the close of the war Captain Kimball was assigned to duty in the Freedmen's Bureau, and stationed in Virginia as superintendent of several counties, with headquarters at Lawrenceville. There, in the midst of a people so recently in rebellion, his life was a number of times in jeopardy. He remained four years in the discharge of most difficult and trying duties, to protect the negro in his newly acquired freedom. He was shot at several times, and received KuKlux letters ordering him to leave the country under pain of death. His noble wife stood by him through it all. At one time, when he was assaulted by four ex-rebels, with intent to kill, she saved his life by running to his rescue with a revolver, and after some hard fighting they succeeded in driving the men away. They were ostracised from society and subjected to many indignities by the ex-Confederates. During the time while Captain Kimball was in charge of the Freedmen's Bureau he had supervision of the registration and elections, and also organized and sustained the colored schools. He was chosen a delegate from the fourth congressional district of Virginia to the Republican convention that met in Chicago May 20, 1868, and nominated General Grant for president. The Freedmen's Bureau expired by limitation of law Jan. 1, 1869. and at that time Captain Kimball received an honorable discharge after an unbroken service of over seven years. He was republican candidate for state senator, and was urged by his friends to run for congress, but being young and without legislative experience, he declined to do so, though the field was clear. He was appointed, soon after his discharge from the service, by General Stoneman, then provincial governor of Virginia, clerk of the county and circuit courts of Brunswick county. This office he held for about six months, when he resigned it, and also his candidacy for state senator, and emigrated to the West, settling in Cameron, Mo., in September, 1869. For several years he engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1872 he was elected a member of the city council and was the acting mayor of the town. In 1884 he was appointed postmaster by President Arthur and held the office until a change of administration. He then removed with his family to Colorado, where he engaged successfully in the real estate business for four years, returning again to Cameron, his old home, in the fall of 1890, where he could have better schooling for his children. Since 1892 he has been secretary and manager of the Ætna Loan Co. of Kansas. He resides in Topeka, Kansas.

1872 Edward Dorr Kimball[8] (William R[7], Eliphalet[6], Eliphalet[5], Job[4], Richard[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born April 16, 1825; married Sept. 12, 1860, Jeanette Ripley Treat, daughter of James Treat, born Aug. 10, 1835, died July 15, 1888. He was educated at the Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H. He became one of the partners in the firm of J. P. Squires & Co., of Boston. In 1866 he closed his connection with this firm and removed to Cornish, N. H., where he owned and lived upon a large and productive farm. After the death of his only child, the farm became unbearable to him and he removed to Chelsea, Mass., and entered into partnership with George N. Squires, in the provision business in Faneuil Hall Market, Boston. After five years, Mr. Squires withdrew from the business and Mr. Kimball continued it alone until 1889, when he retired. In June, 1884, he became a special partner in the firm of John F. Lennon, flour and grain commission dealer, in Pawtucket, R. I. This house soon became the largest of its kind in New England. Since 1890, he has not been engaged in business, except the general care of the stock farm at Newport, N. H., owned by him and managed by his brother, Henry M. Kimball. He is a noble, Christian man, who has spent his life in doing for others. He is generous, sympathetic, and thoughtful for the wants of the needy. Worthy young persons have been educated at academies and colleges. Public institutions have been aided by him. The chapel at Mt. Auburn, Mass., was largely built with his money. Missionaries and needy ministers have been supported by him. He and his wife were zealous in aiding missionary organizations, and since her death he has continued in the good work, doing it all so quietly that even his most intimate friends do not know of its extent. His wife was a woman of literary and musical ability, a devout Christian, and an earnest worker in all church work, a great student of the bible, and gave most liberally to both home and foreign missions. He lives in Watertown, Mass.

Jan. 7, 1893. He came to Boston a poor boy; when he died he was among the most wealthy of its merchants. He commenced the pork business in a small way; and at the time of his death he was the head of the largest pork packing establishment in New England. He always took a great pride in the quality of the products of his factory. A few years ago he commenced a fight against adulterated lard at first almost single handed. But eventually he succeeded in his efforts, and it is due to his work that lard compounds are properly branded in all parts of the country at present. A large pork packer once remarked to the writer that John P. Squire always bought the best hogs that could be obtained in the market in Chicago or Kansas City. His establishment covers many acres of ground at East Cambridge, Mass., and is filled with the most improved machinery. He was just and generous in his treatment of those employed by him. Resided in Arlington, Mass.

1967 Levi Woodbury Kimball[8] (Asa[7], John[6], Asa[5], David[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born in Hopkinton, N. H., Sept. 28, 1826; married Sept. 16, 1869, Grace Maria Tenney, born March 22, 1840, daughter of Nelson and Lydia Ager (Durgin) Tenney. She is very active in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and is superintendent of two departments. His early life was spent in his native town. His first absence from home was when he went with a younger brother on a six months' fishing voyage from Truro, Mass. His father and grandfather were contractors and builders and he and his brothers early became familiar with the business. January 20, 1860, he and his brother, Charles H. Kimball, sailed for San Francisco, Cal., by way of the Isthmus of Panama, arriving in San Francisco on the 11th of February, 1860. They spent a year with indifferent success in the land of gold and returned to Hopkinton. They had gained much experience and L. W. Kimball decided to return to California. His brothers, Warren C. and Francis A., accompanied him. They arrived in San Francisco, Sept. 14, 1861, and commenced business as carpenters and builders under the firm name of Kimball Brothers in November, 1861. They succeeded in this business beyond their most sanguine expectations. They endured great hardships and privations during the winter of 1861–'62, which was a winter of unusual severity. They boarded themselves in their shop, doing their own cooking and eating their breakfasts and suppers by lamplight, and having a cold lunch for dinner, often walking two miles to their work and sleeping in bunks at night. In the spring of 1862, Levi W. Kimball decided to try the gold mines in British Columbia. He arrived at Victoria in June with two experienced miners as companions. They camped there for a month but did not meet with any success; they, at the end of that time, returned to California, where his brothers were finding plenty of work. In 1863, the Kimball Brothers were awarded a contract in Oakland, Cal., for which they received thirty thousand dollars. In the spring of 1864 he made a pedestrian tour into the Sierra Nevada mountains, prospecting in the "Silver Mountain region." He went as far as Virginia City, and further east. He found but little worth developing owing to the inaccessibility of the region. He had, however, the experience, even if the journey was without pecuniary returns. On his homeward trip he was crushed beneath an overturned stage coach, and it was three months before he recovered sufficiently to continue his journey. This substantially finished his mining adventures. Kimball Brothers continued in successful business in Oakland, and in 1865

did a large amount of public work in San Francisco; 1867 was their most prosperous year as builders, one contract alone amounting to nearly a hundred thousand dollars. The members of the firm acquired valuable real estate in Oakland. He spent the winter of 1867–'68 in New Hampshire, returning to California in the spring of 1868. This year he and his brother, F. A. Kimball, went to San Diego to examine the Ranche de la Nacion, of which their firm had the refusal. It consisted of 26,632 acres, and was situated on the widest part of San Diego bay and harbor with six miles continuous water frontage, and it extended seven miles back from the bay, and was adjacent to the city of San Diego. This property they carefully examined and completed the purchase. The financial troubles of 1872–'73 interfered most seriously with the success of plans that had been well made, and much property was lost by the firm. In 1875 he withdrew from the firm of Kimball Brothers, disposing of his interest to his brothers, and removed to Oakland. He still retained his city property in San Diego, National City, and in the Ranch. In 1880–'81, through the exertions of Francis A. Kimball, the Californian Southern Pacific railroad was induced to build into National City, make its terminus there, and establish its works. Soon after came a great boom in real estate. Land bought for a trifle brought almost fabulous prices. Levi W. Kimball had sold most of his property before this great speculation, and does not regret that he possesses none of the "boom gold." His history is of necessity the history of the Kimball Brothers. For fifteen years their lives were most intimately connected by business interests they all shared alike. They are each now more than millionaires. They have done a great work for southern California. Resides at Oakland, Cal.

2025 Daniel Burns Dyer[8] (Elizabeth Howe Kimball[7], Joseph[6], Samuel[5], Aaron[4], David[3], Benjamin[2], Richard[1]) born on a farm near Joliet, Ill., March 21, 1849; married, Nov., 1870, Ida May Casey, born Mound City, Ill., April 20, 1849, daughter of Hon. Newton R. Casey, and granddaughter of Zadock Casey, once governor of Illinois. She is a well educated and accomplished woman, and is much esteemed by her numerous friends for her social and attractive manners. He was educated in the State Normal University, of Illinois. In 1869 he went to the plains and represented the government among the Indians, until 1885. While an Indian agent he took the celebrated and savage Modocs and settled them in houses on farms in the northeast part of Indian territory, at the same time he had charge of several other tribes. But the only ones that gave him trouble were the Modocs. About 1883 he was transferred and placed in charge of the Cheyennes and Arapahoes whom he left in 1885. In that year he went to Kansas City, Mo., and engaged in the real estate and brokerage business. He then became associated with the wealthy parties who compose the Jarvis Conklin Syndicate. Colonel Dyer was connected with the building of the magic city of Guthrie in Oklahoma territory. It was a most interesting period of his eventful life. He was familiar with the country, and went there in 1889 largely from curiosity and to invest in real estate. Things were in a chaotic state, and he being well known, was chosen as mayor, a position that he did not wish, but which he was prevailed upon to accept. He held the office for three months or more. He fully appreciated the difficulties attending the founding of a new town, and managing 15,000 or 18,000 people for whom new laws are to be made, and never did he work harder and never were his executive ability and good judgment put to a more severe test. After three months he returned to Kansas City and soon after went to Augusta, Ga., and engaged in business enterprises of great magnitude. The Jarvis-Conklin Syndicate with which he is connected controls millions of dollars. In the city of Augusta alone it has spent more than $500,000 for the development of the city. They built and run successfully an extensive electric railway system, besides being engaged in other large concerns.

trade, in 1855, when only seventeen years old, he persuaded his father to allow him to leave school and engage in business. He went to Boston, made his own purchases, and embarked in his first business enterprise, and for two years was a popular young merchant in his native town. The glowing accounts of the gold mines on the Pacific coast filled him with a desire for a new and wider field in which to operate. When he made known his design, the family gave their consent with great reluctance. His father relieved him from his business and furnished him with the means to go to California. He also, to provide against any contingencies, gave him a draft for six hundred dollars, to be used if he was sick or if he failed to pay his passage home, fully expecting to see him return disgusted with his folly. Neither contingency happened, and the draft was returned to his father, unused. He went to California with a number of other young men from Calais. They went together from New York, all agreeing to start at the bottom of the ladder. They therefore secured steerage passage on the Moses Taylor, and at Panama were transferred to the Golden Gate. The journey was one of great risk. The ships were packed with passengers, and the small-pox broke out among them. It created quite a panic among the passengers, but was fortunately checked. The vessel afterwards caught fire, but the fire was got under control, and they were safely landed in San Francisco in October, 1857. Upon reaching California he had but thirty-five dollars left. His first work was piling lumber for Mr. Z. B. Haywood, an old friend of his father, to whom he had a letter. The young men kept bachelors' hall in a house on Pacific street. He then purchased a one-horse dray, and the good will of the business, from a man who was homesick and wished to return to the states. He continued this business for several months, clearing a hundred dollars a month, until the former owner returned and bought back his business. He then accepted from General Reddington a position on one of the California Steam Navigation Co.'s vessels. He soon became familiar with steamboating, and was advanced to the position of clerk on the boats running from Sacramento to Red Bluff, then the head of navigation on the Sacramento river.

During this time, which ended about 1860, he enjoyed the advantage of being an inmate of General Reddington's home. His aunt, Mrs. Reddington, was very much attached to him, and to her kind influence he feels that he owes much. His health became impaired while steamboating, and he regained it by two seasons spent in hunting and fishing in the Coast Range mountains. His next business venture was a partnership with General Reddington in sheep raising. After two years spent in this business, he drove his sheep east to the Missouri river. The journey was attended with much hardship, as he had to pass through the wilderness then inhabited only by Indians. He sold his sheep and bought mules, and drove them back to Sacramento, making a handsome profit out of the trip. The debts of the firm being paid off, he loaned his share of the profits to a friend, and lost it. For two years he bought fat sheep and drove them into the mines at Virginia City, Nevada. Then for a short time he returned to steamboating, but again his health failed, and his friend, Dr. Simpson, advised him to leave the river and engage in outdoor pursuits. He therefore went to Tehama county and engaged in real estate transactions. He was very successful in his operations, and acquired large tracts of cheap but valuable lands. In 1870 he again engaged in the sheep business, forming a partnership with J. C. Tyler. He took the active management of the business, and it grew to large dimensions. They made extensive additions to their lands, and have been instrumental in developing this business in Tehama and Shasta counties. In 1875 he formed a partnership with L. S. Welton, in the mercantile business. Mr. Welton retired from the business in 1876, and the firm of Cone & Kimball was formed, Mr. Kimball taking the active management of the business, which was conducted with his characteristic energy. They largely increased their capital and became leading men in the business, handling largely wheat, wool, and dried fruit, in northern California. In politics he has always been a republican, and has been an active member of the republican state committee for years. In 1882 he was nominated for the state board of equalization, and in his district ran far ahead of his ticket. He takes a great interest in local affairs, and has held the office of president of the board of town trustees several times. Was president of the board of trade, and is now president of the agricultural society of Tehama county. He has been prominent in military affairs, and is now, at his own request, a major on the retired list of the National Guard of California. He has for many years been a prominent Mason, has been master of Vesper Lodge No. 84, and generalissimo of Red Bluff Commandery No. 17, and has always taken an active interest in the welfare of the order. Although not a member of the church, he has been for many years chairman of the board of trustees of the Presbyterian church of Red Bluff, and one of its most efficient and zealous supporters. He took an active interest in the building of their large and beautiful church, and besides giving liberally towards the building, presented a magnificent memorial window. Besides being a practical business man, he has considerable power as a public speaker. Whether delivering a political speech upon the leading issues of the day, or making an after-dinner speech, he is always listened to with pleasure. His keen perception and clear logic are not more marked in the one place than his happy wit and bright humor in the other, and these qualities make his presence indispensable on all occasions. His home is most beautifully embowered in vines and roses. His home grounds comprise about three acres dotted over with choice flowers, shrubs, and trees, in semi-tropical magnificence. The Sacramento river flows at the foot of the beautiful lawn. From the house the snow-capped Sierra Nevada is seen to the eastward, and the towering Coast Range in the west, and Mount Shasta, with its perennial coat of white, is visible in the north.

2345 Elbert L. Kimball[9] (Virgil W.[8], Royal[7], Jonathan[6], Boyce[5], Ebenezer[4], Samuel[3], Richard[2], Richard[1]) born in North Cohocton, Steuben Co., N. Y., Oct. 6, 1843; died Oct. 6, 1889; married Dec. 24, 1870, Rose L. Acre, born Oct. 22, 1852. He moved to Missouri with his parents when he was eleven years of age. He was living at Springfield, Mo., attending school, when the war began. He enlisted as a private in the Union army, July 7, 1861, and was engaged in all the stirring events in Missouri from that time until after the Battle of Wilson's Creek and the retreat to Rolla. He was discharged at Rolla at the end of three months' service. He was then given a place in the quartermaster's department, where he remained till April, 1862. In the fall of 1862 he returned to his old home in New York, where he enlisted in Co. G, One Hundred and Eighty-ninth New York Vols., and was at once sent to Virginia, where he served until Lee's surrender. He was mustered out at Elmira, N. Y., June 2, 1865. He was graduated from the law department of Michigan University in 1868, and settled at Nevada, Mo. He practised his profession at this place until his death. He was an active member of the G. A. R., and was at one time commander of the Department of Missouri. He was active in political matters. In 1886 he was the republican candidate for congress from the twelfth Missouri district. In 1888 he was the candidate for governor on the republican ticket. A few months before his death he wrote to us: "This year received the republican nomination for governor of Missouri. Made a splendid race against odds, being defeated by a little over 13,000 votes, running ahead of the presidential ticket 6,278 votes." In recognition of his splendid work and of his ability he was appointed by President Harrison, U. S. district attorney. He died suddenly in the midst of his life work, at Kansas City, Mo. He was an able, brilliant, pushing man, and had he lived would have taken an active part in the new life that has been aroused in Missouri.

She was graduated at the Cambridge, Mass., High school, and afterwards attended the celebrated school of Prof. Louis Agassiz. He was educated at the Agricultural College of Pennsylvania, and at the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard University. He was graduated from the Scientific School in 1866, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science, Summa Cum Laude. He presented as his graduation thesis a collection of tables for the use of chemists, entitled "Chemical Tables." This was published in the summer of 1866. The next winter he spent as private assistant to Dr. Wolcott Gibbs, in the Lawrence Scientific School. Returning to Pennsylvania he taught in a private school for a few months, and then received the appointment of instructor in chemistry in the Lehigh University of Bethlehem, Pa. He resigned this appointment at the end of the school year to accept the appointment of assistant under Dr. Gibbs in the Lawrence Scientific School. This position was held until the organization of the school was changed in 1871. He was then employed as assistant editor of the Boston Journal of Chemistry until after the great Boston fire, when he commenced business for himself as an analytical chemist and assayer. He was appointed assayer of ores and metals for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in December, 1872, a position that he held until 1894, when the office was abolished. In 1884 he was appointed by Governor Robinson assayer and inspector of liquors for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He has been annually reappointed to this position since that time. For seventeen years he was professor of chemistry in the Boston Dental College, holding the position until compelled to resign by pressure of other business. He served for three years as inspector of milk for the city of Cambridge. During this time he wrote several articles on adulteration of food. One of these, written for the state board of health of Massachusetts, was the basis of the food legislation of the state. He was one of the experts appointed on the census of 1880, and conducted a long series of experiments on the properties of the woods of the United States. These experiments were published in the ninth volume of the census, forming about a third part of that volume. The summer of 1893 was spent in Chicago, as one of the judges of the Columbian Exposition. He served there as a secretary of the committee of the department of liberal arts, that had charge of the chemical exhibits. After finishing the work in this department he was placed in charge of groups seventeen and eighteen in the agricultural department. These groups comprised the animal and vegetable oils, fertilizers, and waste products, this being a branch of applied science to which he had paid much attention. He also had charge of the starches. He has been engaged in many important patent suits as an expert, among the most notable of these being the green corn cases, in which was involved the novelty of the processes of packing corn. For many years he has been consulting chemist to the Philadelphia Rubber Works, being employed in investigating methods for reclaiming rubber that has been once used, and converting it into a useful commercial article. He has made many long journeys in the United States and Canada in the course of his business. He was among the first to investigate the fossil phosphates in Florida. In 1882 he made a trip to Turks Island and the Caicos to investigate the guano deposits on Cape Comet. He made a report on these which was published in the proceedings of the Boston Natural History Society. A few years later he made a trip to the north coast of New Foundland, to examine the deposits of iron pyrites on that coast. He is a member of a number of scientific societies, among which are the American Society of Arts and Sciences, the American Chemical Society, the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Society of Industrial Chemistry of England. He is also a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society. They reside in Cambridge, Mass.

KIMBALLS OF YORK COUNTY, MAINE.

The Kimball family has always been well represented in York county, Maine. Some members of the family have been easily identified as descendants of Richard Kimball of Ipswich. In other cases it has been impossible to connect these families in any way with Richard Kimball. Most prominent among the Kimballs of the county are those of Wells. Their descendants moved to Lyman and other towns. The family at one time was quite numerous in this town, but the town records are very defective, and it has been almost impossible to trace the family by means of these records. An effort was made to trace them by means of the county records at Alfred, with but little better success. We are able, therefore, to present only several detached, fragmentary records of the family in this locality. We have tried to arrange these families properly, but there may be errors in some cases. The family themselves seem to have no records extending further back than 1800.

1 Caleb Kimball[1]. The first mention we have been able to find of Caleb Kimball of Wells, Me., is his marriage to Susanna Cloyes, June 15, 1704. Susanna was probably the daughter of Nathaniel Cloyes. She was received into full communion on proof of faith, Sept. 6, 1713. Caleb Kimball of Wells sells land in Wells, July 10, 1710. Caleb Kimball and wife Susanna sell land on Ogunquid river to Thomas Mason, Nov. 12, 1716. Caleb Kimball and wife Susanna, and Abigail Wiggins, widow of James Wiggins, sell all rights in land formerly Thomas Mills', Feb. 16, 1720. Caleb Kimball of Wells, James Smith of York, John Fulsom of Exeter, and Abigail Wiggins of Wells, divide a tract of land, July 1, 1718. Abbie Wiggins and Caleb Kimball are to have two acres more and some marsh land in consideration of the maintenance of their grandfather, and for debts they have paid for their uncle, John Mills. Caleb Kimball bought one fourth of Kennebunk Falls of Samuel Littlefield, Sept. 4, 1732.

Nathaniel Kimball of Wells was a juryman, July, 1737. Nathaniel Kimball of Wells, and wife, Abigail, and children of John Cousins, and Abigail Wiggins, widow of John Cousins and mother of Abigail Kimball, make a deed, July 2, 1726. Nathaniel was chosen constable and paid a fine in 1736. He was a second lieutenant on the expedition to Louisburg in 1745. He petitioned for the incorporation of the parish in 1750, and signed the covenant the same year. His house was near the Kennebunk river, and he was called the father of Kennebunk. He was taxed £3.13s.6d. in 1750. He was on the committee on the parsonage in 1755, and was on the committee on delegates to congress in 1775, and on the committee of safety in 1776. He gave two shirts and one pair of stockings for the army in 1778. He built the first vessel in Kennebunk, and kept the first post-office in the state of Maine. He kept a public house in 1761.

For several years he was engaged in the manufacture of furnaces and ranges in New York city, residing in Brooklyn. He failed in the panic of 1857. He next engaged in the dredging business, taking important contracts for deepening and straightening the channels of Mobile harbor, Alabama, the St. John's river, Florida, and the Mississippi river at New Orleans. While in the latter city he organized a tow-boat company. The outbreak of the Civil War broke up his business and his boats were seized by the Confederate government. His largest boat, the Enoch Train, became the rebel ram, Manassas. He declined a position in the rebel service, and by this action lost any chance he might have had of receiving compensation for his vessels seized by the rebels. He immediately proceeded to Washington with all possible speed, to inform the government in regard to the fitting out of the ram by the Confederates. In 1861 he was appointed acting master in the U. S. navy, and served with great ability and success until his death in 1863. He was stationed at Charlestown the most of the time, and was inspector of open contracts, and by his activity and vigilance saved the government a large amount of money in purchasing supplies.

Nathaniel Kimball[2], said to have been born in Massachusetts; married May 18, 1820, Nancy Furgeson, born 1801, died Jan. 26, 1825. He was a merchant and resided at Salem, Indiana. He died on board of a trading boat on the Mississippi river, Jan. 12, 1829, and was buried in the territory of Arkansas. He left a son, Nathan Kimball[3].

Nathan Kimball[3] was born Nov. 22, 1823, at Fredericksburg, Ind.; married Sept. 23, 1845, Martha Ann McPheeters, born Livonia, Ind., June 9, 1828; died Livonia, Ind., April 14, 1850, daughter of James and Mary (Mitchell) McPheeters of Livonia, Ind.; married 2d, July 29, 1850, Emily C. McPheeters, born Livonia, Ind., Jan. 20, 1833, died Ogden, Utah, Nov. 25, 1892, daughter of John C. and Sarah (Orchard) McPheeters. He spent three years at the Asbury University, now DePauw University, at Greencastle, Ind., but was compelled to leave this place on account of lack of funds. In 1841, shortly after leaving college, he commenced teaching school at Independence, Mo., where he remained for a year and a half. He soon after this quit teaching and went to farming. In 1843 he commenced the study of medicine under Dr. Alexander McPheeters, and in 1845 he married the sister of his preceptor. He practised medicine until the war with Mexico, when he raised a company and was commissioned captain on June 14, 1846. He served until June 23, 1847, when his company was mustered out at New Orleans. He returned home and continued the practice of his profession until the spring of 1861. On April 17, 1861, he raised a company, and was commissioned captain on April 24th by Gov. Morton. He was assigned to duty in the Fourteenth Regt., Ind. Vols. When the regiment was organized, he was commissioned colonel. In this capacity he served under General Rosecrans at Rich Mountain, West Virginia. On the 12th of September, 1861, after a three and a half hours' engagement, he defeated a rebel attack at Cheat Mountain. In January, 1862, he was assigned to the command of the first brigade of the division, and on General Lander's death he assumed command of the division until relieved by General James Shields, on March 7, 1862. He was then sent with General Shields into the Shenandoah valley to operate with General Banks against Stonewall Jackson. In an engagement General Shields was severely wounded, and Colonel Kimball, being the senior colonel in the division, was put in command. In this position he succeeded in defeating the advance of Jackson's army and compelled him to retire. For his bravery in this battle he was commissioned brigadier-general. On the night of the 29th of May, 1862, he attacked the enemy at Front Royal, which place was captured after a hard fight. After General Shields was defeated at Fort Republick, General Kimball's brigade was ordered to report to General McClellan on James river, below Richmond. On July 2, 1862, he took part in the fight at Harrison's Landing. He drove the enemy from their position and occupied it himself. On the morning of the 4th he again repulsed the enemy. The next engagement in which he took an active part was Antietam. He next took part in the Battle of Fredericksburg. Here he was severely wounded in the thigh. On account of his wounds he received a leave of absence and remained at home until March, 1863, when he was ordered to join General Grant at Vicksburg. On July, 1863, he drove a division of the rebel army, under General Wert Adams, from their position after a fight lasting about thirty minutes. After the surrender of Vicksburg he was sent to

Arkansas to operate against General Price. He remained in Arkansas until sent with important despatches to Washington, D. C. After this he was ordered by the president to go to Arkansas and reorganize the state government. This he succeeded in doing early in 1864. In April, 1864, he was relieved of his command in Arkansas and ordered to report to General Sherman, commanding the Division of the Mississippi. Before his departure the senate and house of representatives of the state of Arkansas tendered him their thanks for his indefatigable labors in behalf of the loyal men of the state. On the 22d of the preceding February he was nominated by the republicans of Indiana for lieutenant-governor, with General Morton for governor, but he declined the offer, as he was actively engaged in the field. Leaving Arkansas he went to the Department of the Cumberland, where he was assigned to the Fourth Army Corps, under General O. O. Howard, and placed in command of the first brigade of the second division of that corps. Assuming command on the 22d of May, on the 27th he was engaged in the Battle of New Hope Church, Georgia. He was after this continually engaged in skirmishing until the 5th of June. His next engagement was at Jones's Creek, Georgia, on the 19th of June. He next took part in the famous Battle of Kenesaw Mountain. He was actively engaged in the operations which resulted in the capture of Atlanta. After the capture of Atlanta he was ordered to report to Gov. Morton for special duty, which duty was to subdue the Knights of the Golden Circle. This he succeeded in doing in about two months, without bloodshed. For this he received the special thanks of Gov. Morton. On November 26, 1864, he rejoined the army in front of Columbia, Tenn. On the morning of December 15, General Kimball led the attack on Nashville, and on the 11th of December he was ordered to attack the rebels who held a position behind their works on the Franklin pike. This he did successfully and captured their artillery and many prisoners. For his service in this battle he was brevetted major-general. He then made a campaign into eastern Tennessee. Returning to Nashville, he was mustered out of service, Sept. 25, 1865. On the 22d of February, 1866, he was nominated state treasurer of Indiana, a position to which he was afterwards elected. He was again elected to the same position in 1868. In 1872 he was an elector on the Grant ticket, and was elected the same year a member of the state legislature, and served on the committee on ways and means. In 1873 he was appointed by General Grant surveyor-general of Utah, in which office he served one term. He was appointed by President Hayes postmaster of Ogden, Utah, and was again appointed by President Harrison, in 1889, to the same position. He has taken a prominent part in the Grand Army of the Republic, and was commander of the Department of Indiana in 1866 and 1867. He now resides at Ogden, Utah.

THE KEMBLES OF BOSTON, MASS.

Among the early settlers of Boston, Mass., were three brothers whose names are spelled in a variety of ways on the records. They seem to have generally followed the spelling Kemble when they signed their names. Their names were Giles, Henry, and Thomas Kemble. The only record found of Giles is a deed given him by his brother, Thomas Kemble, discharging him of all demands. This is dated Feb. 6, 1657. Giles Kemble died Aug. 1, 1659, as is shown by the Boston records.

2 Henry Kemble[2], married Nov. 13, 1656, Sarah Founell, born ——, died Aug., 1657, daughter of John Founell; married 2d, Mary Brigden, born ——, died July 4, 1696. He was an anchor smith. He was a man of considerable property for the times. His inventory amounted to £2,074,12s. He owned considerable land at Cape Porpoise, in York Co., Me., and had some in Boston, Mass.

CHILDREN.

i. Zachariah[3], b. Oct. 7, 1663. He was a shipwright. He appointed his mother, Mary Kemble, widow of Henry Kemble, his attorney, June 23, 1687.
ii. Henry[3], b. Feb. 25, 1665.
iii. Giles[3], b. July 14, 1668.
iv. Abigail[3], b. Oct. 13, 1669; m. Dec. 22, 1692, Philip Voden; m. 2d, Jan. 19, 1698, Isaac Jarvis. Abigail Jarvis, late Voden, testifies to her signature in October, 1702.
4 v. Timothy[3], b. Aug. 29, 1672.
vi. Mary[3], m. William Hough.
vii. Sarah[3], m. Philip Bass.

3 Thomas Kemble[2], born Jan. 14, 1622; died Jan. 29, 1688; married Elizabeth Trerice, born ——, died Dec. 19, 1712. He lived in Charlestown and Boston, and was buried in Copp's Hill burying ground. He is called a merchant in the records. He seems to have moved to Boston after the birth of his children. He was living in Boston in 1682. He owned land on Cape Porpoise, in Wells, Me.

CHILDREN.

i. John[3], b. July 1, 1656. John Kemble, Cooper made his will in New York and left his property to Elizabeth Knight, daughter of Sarah and Richard Knight, reserving a life interest to his mother, Elizabeth Kemble, and sister, Sarah Knight.

ii. Samuel[3]. Samuel Kemble, mariner, died on board the sloop Adventurer on her voyage from Barbadoes to Boston, and administration was granted to his father, Thomas Kemble, of Boston, Aug. 16, 1684.

iii. Sarah[3], b. April 19, 1666; m. Richard Knight. Child: Elizabeth Knight[4], b. May 8, 1689. Sarah Knight calls herself only surviving child of Thomas Kemble of Boston and Elizabeth, his wife, in 1714. She wrote an account of a journey that she made from New York to Boston in 1704. This has been several times printed.

iv. Rebecca[3], b. July 12, 1668.

Colored Troops, Oct. 19, 1863, and afterwards 1st Lt. He was commissioned captain in the 116th U. S. Colored Troops, Sept. 29, 1864. As private and officer he took an active part in thirty-seven battles, including the First Bull Run, Yorktown, Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, Glendale, Malvern Hill, Bristoe Station, Groveton, Second Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, New Market Heights, Petersburg, and Appomattox Court House. At New Market Heights he was breveted on the battle-field for gallantly leading his company with unbroken lines across an open field raked by the enemy's fire, and capturing at the bayonet's point a rebel redoubt. He received a bayonet wound in a charge at Williamsburg and a bullet wound at Gettysburg. On being mustered out at the close of the war he was honored with the words, "for faithful and meritorious services during the war." Returning home he carried on his business as a machinist in Abington, Milford, and Brockton. He had much literary taste and inventive genius and was as successful in the arts of peace as in those of war.

INDEX.

In this index only the names of those connected by birth or marriage with the Kimball family are given. Names mentioned incidentally in the text are not indexed.

The figures before the name show the date of birth or baptism. After the name, the page on which the name is to be found. A name occurring twice on the same page is only indexed once.

In case of two numbers after a name, the first shows the page on which the person's parents are found. The second gives the page of his own family.

The small figures after the name serve to indicate the generation to which the person belongs. They also serve, with few exceptions, to show that the person is descended from Richard or Henry Kimball.
